TINLEY RADIO ARTIST IN CAVE RECORD

Radio Entertainers In Lookout Mount. Cave Over 19 Hours

Miss Louise Rothenberg, Tinley Park's own radio artist and who is now broadcasting over station WDOO at Chattanooga, Tenn., had a very thrilling experience in company with a number of other radio artists last Saturday when they stayed longer in Lookout mountain caves than any other humans.

In a letter to her folk at Tinley Park, Miss Rothenberg told of looking down in a pit and saw some old shoes, so one of the men in the party went down and found a pair of men's shoes, an empty pack of cigarettes and some bones. It is thought the skeleton was that of a man, who either fell or starved to death. They also discovered a water fall that no one knew was there.

The following article describing the trip thru the caves appeared in the Chattanooga Free Press, Monday October 25th.

They "stooped to conquer" — did six modern Chattanooga cave explorers — and came back with the bacon.

It's not quite why all this came about, it appears. But it came into the minds of four petite young ladies and a couple of Ruby Falls guides last Saturday night that they wanted very much to do something that has never been done before.

Talking it over beforehand, they decided they were determined to break two records.

The first was to stay in Lookout Mountain caves longer than any other humans. The second was to go further into the mysterious blackness of this subterranean mystery-land than had anyone before them.

It was recalled that three girls from New Orleans remained in the great cavity 12 hours in August, 1934. "We can beat that," they boasted.

And so, equipped with six flash-lights, six packages of cigarettes, eight candles, 36 sandwiches, two bottles of soft drinks and pent-up nerves they were ready.

The group of happy go lucky explorers was composed of Betty Kasper, Genevieve Kasper, Louise Rothenberg, WDOO entertainers; Margie Dalton, comely, blond-haired blues singer who was recently the star on Major Edward Bowes' amateur hour and Roy Thurman and Walter Rich-ey, the guides.

Came 11:30 last Saturday night and everything had left Cavern Castle but these six. They had waited for this because they didn't want the manager to know what they had planned.

Stealing the elevator, they descended to the 420 foot level and began walking. This is approximately 1,200 feet below the earth's surface. They climbed down through the lacy-looking crags two levels below the supertine walls and started out to discover something new.

From this point we shall continue with notes taken from a diary kept by Margie Dalton.

"We walked and crawled until we became so hot and tired we could not continue any further. We sat on some rocks and smoked and talked for a while.

"Some of the passages were so narrow we had great difficulty getting through, but somehow we managed to make it. At 4:25 Sunday morning the first flash light gave out. Somehow Walter dropped the next flash light and it must have fallen at least 75 feet in a pit. We rested while he went down and rescued it. He found a small lake, but couldn't tell where the water came from.

At 5 o'clock we heard Roy yelling and he finally came back up from the pit and found us. We moved on over to a point where we could see the lake better. It appeared to be at least 225 feet down to it.

"At 5:15 we went past the guide wire, but we still found names and dates carved on the rocks. Other names had been smoked in the rocks.

"We became so hungry we could not proceed any further. We sat down on some rocks and Roy went back to find the basket of sandwiches. He had to crawl through some mud and over crags to find us again. He was gone two hours.

"That was the quietest place I ever saw, especially when you get away from the water. There is not a living thing — no bugs or snakes. "We ate our first food since we went in the caves at 11:15 Sunday morning. Our hands were cold, but we didn't mind.

"We proceeded a little bit further. It was noon Sunday. We wanted to see what else we could find. Our knees hurt so bad we had to roll in some places.

"We then started back. We looked for candles we had left burning and other things we had dropped along the way. We passed a chamber that was at least 150 feet below us. On our way back, while torn, almost indiscernible scraps from newspapers. They were dated 1902. "That was the same year three boys went into the caves and never

World Traveler Will Speak At Zion Church

Mr. Leon Ray Livingston, traveler, author and orator, better known as the "A.N.O. 1, Wanderer" will speak at the Zion Lutheran church, in Tinley Park Monday evening November 1st, at 7:45 o'clock.

His subject will be, "Where is my Wandering Boy?" Mr. Livingston has had a checkered career: running away from home in San Francisco when but 11 years old, he roamed about for 30 years. When he finally returned he discovered that his good parents had died of broken hearts because of his disappearance. He settled down to a life of industry and usefulness, married and raised a family. He is now giving all his time to the run away children problem. He has covered 520,000 miles at an expense of $7.61.

Will County Boys Make Entry For Stock Show

Will county's first entries for the 1937 International Live Stock Exposition, to be held in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, November 27th to December 4th, was received today from two farm boys.

Charles J. Francis, age 12, of New Lenox, will exhibit a pure bred Hereford steer of his own raising in the exposition's junior live stock feeding contest, in which boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 20 exhibit baby beefs, lambs, and pigs. Chester, Ebert has entered a pure bred Shorthorn steer in the same event. His entry was grand champion at the 1937 Will County Fair and reserve champion at the Illinois State Fair. Ebert is 18 years old and lives on a farm near Mokena.

The junior feeding contest will be judged on the opening day of the International Exposition, November 27th. Last year a total of over 360 farm youths from 12 states competed.

Lutheran Hour On Air Sunday

The most important need for man today, as ever before, is the salvation of his soul from sin, Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph.D., declared last Sunday in the first of a new series of coast-to-coast broadcasts of the Lutheran Hour.

Place the accumulated wealth of the entire world on one end of the scale and the soul of man on the other side, and the soul will outweigh this wealth. So valuable is the soul in the eyes of God that He gave His Son into death in order to make possible its salvation.

The speaker based his words on that well known text: "What is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul." Matthew 16: 26. In closing, Dr. Maier pleaded with his unseen audience to turn to the only Saviour, Jesus the Christ, for their salvation.

Dr. Maier, professor of Biblical interpretation at Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, and widely known for his writings and lectures on religious and religious-social subjects, will broadcast each Sunday afternoon at 3:30 Central Standard Time, over 45 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System. From Chicago the Lutheran Hour is heard over WCFL. This program is the largest independent religious program on the air, pays for its broadcasts at regular rates, a substantial portion of the expense being contributed by the listening audience.

returned. We looked for their bones but could not find any trace of them.

"Near the end we crawled 50 feet to the big chamber and then found the entrance. Boy, we were glad to get out of that dark, scary place."

Nineteen hours later—it was 6:00 o'clock Sunday night — Margie, Louise, Genevieve, Betty, Walter and Roy came out of the caves. They had risked their necks, but they broke the record.

They were black, dirty, blue and quite a bit sore when they emerged from the caverns, but they all declared that they had spent a pretty interesting weekend. Try it sometime!

Poultry Thieves Raid Mokena Farm; Drop Knife

With the Thanksgiving season approaching, poultry thieves are getting busy and last Sunday night they visited the L. G. Bruder farm west of Mokena and stole over forty guinea hens, ducks and chickens. In their evidently hurried departure the thieves left a new butcher knife behind them. Mr. Bruder notified the sheriff's office and deputies called and took the knife with them for possible finger prints. Nothing further has been heard of the case.

Orland Legion Post Sponsors Installation Party

The annual installation party of the Orland Park Post of the American Legion was held at the Big Run Golf Club, Saturday, October 23rd. A chicken dinner was served to the Post members and their friends. After the dinner the new officers for 1938 were installed by the Commander of the 8th district Comrade Leich. The new officers are: Commander, Glahn; 1st vice commander, Pettit; 2nd vice commander, Jelly; Adjutant, Pettit; Chaplain, Cooper; Sergeant at arms, Cox and service officer, Van Buren Knox. After the installation ceremony the party enjoyed dancing.

Last Notice

The group of people taking part in the plays which the Mokena Methodist church will sponsor tonight, held a Halloween party after rehearsal last night. Games were played and a good time enjoyed.

As a last minute reminder, don't forget to attend this entertainment, which will be given in the school auditorium at 8 p. m. tonight.

Yunker Holding Big Sale of Cattle

When it comes to handling a large volume of live stock of good grade, H. F. Yunker, widely known Orland township stock dealer really goes to town. This week he is advertising 277 head of extra good stock for sale. Read his adv. on page 9 of this issue for more particulars.

Orland Catholic Church Scene of Pretty Wedding

At an impressive service, nuptial high mass, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, in the St. Michael's Catholic church in Orland Park, Miss Cecelia Winke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winke of Homer township became the bride of Mr. Harry Cooper, son of Mrs. Walter Cooper of Mokena.

At the appointed hour, to the strains of the wedding march played on the organ, the bridal party took their places at the altar of the church, where the priest of the church, the Rev. Father Wm. Rooney met them and performed the service.

Miss Evelyn Winke, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor. She was becomingly gowned in a blue taffeta gown with a shoulder veil which fell from a cap surrounding her face in soft folds. She carried a bouquet of blue asters.

Little June also sister of the bride dressed in blue taffeta colonial dress carried a small basket from which she scattered flower petals in the pathway of the bride.

The bride who was lovely in a white lace gown of princess style with a train, and a long tulle veil caught in a halo cap trimmed with pearls, entered the church on the arm of her brother John, who presented her to the groom at the altar. Her bouquet was also of asters.

Mr. James Marti of Mokena served the groom as best man.

The ushers were Mr. Milton Woodrich and Owen Maue of Mokena.

A wedding dinner was served at the bride's parents home to the immediate families and the bridal party after which Mr. and Mrs. Cooper departed by motor for St. Petersburg, Florida and Virginia where they will visit with relatives.

After November 15 they will be at home in the Cooper farm residence on Wolf road, Mokena where they have an apartment furnished.

The many friends of this young couple wish them many years of happiness.

Green Pantry Scene of Fire

The Green Pantry lunch room in New Lenox was the scene of a fire Sunday morning when gasoline became ignited. A fire extinguisher quickly put the blaze out. The interior of the lunch room was badly smoked and charred in spots.

Orland Lutheran Church To Hold Chicken Supper

The annual chicken supper and bazaar sponsored by the Orland Park Lutheran Ladies Aid society will take place on Thursday Nov. 4 in the school. Serving will be from 5 to 8 p. m.

Frankfort Men To Hold Banquet

The annual Father and Son banquet of the Men's Endeavor Club of the Methodist church of Frankfort will be held in the church on the evening of Thursday Nov. 18. This annual event has always been one of the out standing occasions of the club.

A splendid program has been arranged and all indications are that this year's banquet will exceed all others in attendance and elaborateness. Tickets will be on sale in the near future.

The newly elected officers of the club are: President, Alvin Hill; Vice president, Arthur Bauch; Secretary, Urban Schellhase and Treasurer Frank Kohlhaagen.

Mokena Sportsmen Will Hold Meeting

MRS. HY. HARMS SEDAN PRAIRIE TAKEN BY DEATH

Mrs. Henry Harms, well known resident of the Sedan Prairie territory, died last Friday. Funeral services were held last Sunday at the Sedan Prairie Lutheran church with the Rev. Treskow officiating.

Frankfort To Consider Buying New Fire Truck

This Saturday evening, October 31st at 8 o'clock, a meeting will be held in the Frankfort village hall to consider the purchase of a new fire truck. The committee which was recently appointed to see other fire trucks will make their report. All farmers in the Frankfort territory are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Mokena Church Makes Improvement

Quite a noticeable improvement and convenience is the masonry constructed near the entrance of the Immanuel Lutheran church in Mokena to be used for a frame work of a church bulletin board.

The erection of the arch was consummated thru the cooperation of the church Men's Club at the suggestion of the pastor, Rev. W. J. Geffert.

The work was performed by a brother in law of Rev. Mr. Geffert, Mr. Gordon Van Delft, a contractor in stone construction of St. Louis, Mo., and is a very beautiful piece of work. It is of lime stone construction 8 feet high and 8 feet wide at the base.

The stone was procured and transported to the spot by Fred Mentsch of Mokena. Improvements of this character denote interest and should be commended.

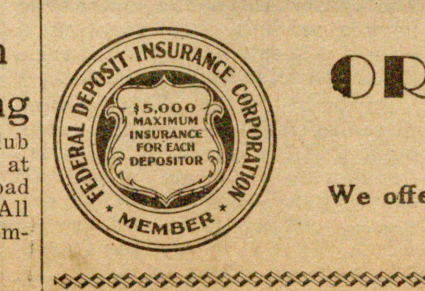

Improve New Lenox Crossing

The Cedar street crossing over the Rock Island tracks in New Lenox which has been in a dangerous condition for sometime has been placed in a safe shape. The east bound main track has been raised and the slope of the pavement on the south side of the track has also been brought down to a level with the rails. This week the wooden crossing was torn out and a crossing of concrete blocks has been placed. The space between the two tracks has been concreted. This crossing is now in excellent condition.

Orland Park Legion Armistice Day Dance Nov. 13

The Orland Park Post of the American Legion will give their seventh annual Armistice Day dance Saturday evening, November 13th at the Goodings Grove dance hall. A big Chicago orchestra has been engaged. There will be a valuable door prize given away. Favors will be given to all. This will be a big celebration to which the general public is invited. This is the first affair of the 1938 Post Officers, so come out and enjoy this first big party.

Save . . . For A Purpose

THROUGH AT 70TH CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

St. Peter's Evangelical church at Frankfort had a red letter day last Sunday when the 70th anniversary of the founding of the congregation and the re-dedication of the newly renovated church was held.

The morning and afternoon services were crowded to capacity and sermons were preached in German and in English. There was special music and singing.

The days activities were climaxed with a stirring and highly pleasing service and organ recital in the evening.

During the pipe organ recital from 7:00 p. m., to 7:45 was in charge of Prof. Waldemar Hille of Elmhurst College. He presided at the organ. He is a master of pipe organ music. He played many soul stirring compositions, which embodied the very soul of music. The large church was thronged to capacity, yet the congregation was attentive one could almost hear a pin drop as the popular expression has it. On this program of music, Mrs. Wesley Hollstein of Frankfort, also appeared as soloist. She sang "Fear Not Ye, O Israel" by Dudley Buck; "He Leadeth Me" by Risker; "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains" by Harker. Mrs. Hollstein is a sweet singer and her numbers were thoroughly enjoyed. She studied voice and music in Europe a number of years ago.

Following the pipe organ recital, the regular evening service was entered into. The choir and the congregation took part in the musical part of the service.

The message of the evening was brought by Rev. A. T. Gerhold of Kewanee, Illinois. He pointed out that the church today was suffering under the dictatorship of the rulers of Europe. He also declared that in order to draw people to church many ministers resort to entertainment features instead of preaching the old time gospel message.

Rev. Mr. Gerhold is the son of Rev. G. S. Gerhold, pastor of St. Peter's Evangelical Church.

The church was prettily decorated with many beautiful bouquets of flowers.

The church has been beautified by the installation of a very fine chancel service. New carpet has also been laid adding to the beauty of the church.

The large pipe organ was recently completely overhauled and is now in excellent shape.

St. Peter's congregation has made rapid progress and growth in the past few years and the many friends of St. Peter's hope they will continue to prosper.

The congregation published a neat souvenir book giving the history and other interesting data of the church.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

John C. Webb, seventy-eight, who served as city clerk of West Frankfort for twelve years, died at his home near Benton.

Linden Frank Baker, thirty-three years old, of Danville, was killed near Paris when his auto turned over in a ditch after colliding with another car.

With ten mines employing some 8,000 men in operation, increased activity in the Franklin county coal field reflected the somewhat belated annual fall pickup in the industry.

Plans were made in Rockford for formally dedicating the new $238,000 Auburn street bridge November 15. Gov. Henry Horner and other state officials will be asked to attend.

Illinois dedicated a new scenic river drive, a state highway along the east bank of the Mississippi from Hamilton to historic Nauvoo for a distance of twelve miles.

Approximately 600 delegates from throughout the state will meet in Elgin December 3, 4 and 5 for the annual state older boys' conference under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian association.

Clarence Voorhees Williams, superintendent of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society and known as a pioneer leader in child welfare work, died of heart disease in the Evanston hospital.

Secretary of State E. J. Hughes issued a state charter to the Jersey Breeders' association of Tazewell county, Pekin. Incorporators are F. E. Swartzendruber, Ben F. Lich and L. H. Koch.

Reorganization of the Illinois Republican party and the planning of a vigorous 1938 campaign are the objectives of state G. O. P. factions at a meeting of the state central committee in Springfield October 21-22.

The thirteenth annual conference of district 16, Illinois Congress of Parent-Teachers, was held in Fairfield with 179 representatives from five counties in attendance. Mrs. Iva McCallister of Carmi was the presiding officer.

Pleading that he was too drunk to know what he was doing when he stole a bushel of corn from the corn crib of Asa Anderson, his neighbor, Ed Fickenson, farmer, living near Herrin, was freed at Marion after facing trial for burglary and larceny.

To prevent the closing of two important WPA projects, members of the board of supervisors agreed to give financial aid in the maintenance of the recreation and sewing projects in Adams county. Seventy-eight persons are employed by the projects, with a pay roll of $56,030 annually.

Three proposed winter WPA projects for Hoopston were considered by the city council. They are the extension of city water mains, a new bathroom for McFarren park and drain tiling for Floral Hill cemetery. Mayor William Beggs was authorized to appoint a committee to confer with WPA officials to select one for a start of work.

Frank L. Mann, eighty-three years old, one of America's outstanding agriculturists, died at Gilman of cancer. Mann was on the agricultural advisory committee of the University of Illinois and was director of the State Farmers institute. He was born May 8, 1854, in Marshall county and was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1876.

The state's bonded indebtedness October 1 was $200,497,500, of which $130,014,000 is for state highway bonds, State Treasurer John Martin said in his monthly report. It compares with a September 1 indebtedness of $200,683,500. State receipts for September, Martin said, totaled $16,180,677 as against disbursements of $18,667,295. August income totaled $17,948,544, and for September a year ago it was $15,502,975.

Abolition of the collection plate in the Rock Falls Methodist Episcopal church by Rev. R. M. Furnish, pastor, has more than doubled the church's revenue. The pastor believes the innovation has created a more devout feeling among his congregation. Instead of contributing to Sunday collections the members are visited each month by a collector and a definite sum is paid toward support of the church.

Memorial services for the late State Supreme Court Justice Lott R. Herrick, Farmer City, who died recently at Rochester, Minn., were held by the Supreme court in Springfield. Herrick's black judicial robes were draped over his empty chair on the court bench and motion to hold the services was presented by John Voight, Chicago, president of the Illinois State Bar association. Former Judge Edward Barry, Bloomington, and Judge L. E. Stone, Springfield, delivered addresses of tribute at the services.

Privately owned taverns and resorts located along the Mississippi at Quincy are making preparations for the advance in the river's stage that will be certain to result when nine-foot channel dams and locks are placed in operation.

Wild deer, flourishing with the state ban on hunting them, have become so plentiful in the Rock river valley that they are damaging crops. Farmers report they frequently find a herd of twenty or thirty feeding in fields. Soybeans attract them most. Fences have proved a poor barrier.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—There is much talk among the Republicans, both for and against, concerning the proposal to hold a general party conference early next year. The plan projected would bring together delegates from every state just the same as the convention that is held every four years for nominating the presidential and vice presidential candidates and formulation of party policies through adoption of a campaign platform.

The question has many angles and in consequence many pros and cons already have been advanced. In natural consequence also, some very well-known Republicans have taken definite decisions, either for or against the plan which has the approval of men like John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican national committee, and former President Herbert Hoover. Some very splendid men find themselves honestly in opposition and have said so in unequivocal terms.

The issue will be fought out at a meeting of the national committee early in November and probably there will be such a convention early in 1938.

As I have said, there is argument on both sides but after discussing the situation with many Republicans, it appears to me that the advantages outweigh the disadvantages. I say this from the standpoint of the country at large.

Many times in these columns, I have expressed the conviction that a strong minority party, whether that party be Republican or Democratic, is a very healthy condition for the country as a whole. A political party with too great a majority is likely to run away with itself and do many unsound things. We have had proof of this during the Roosevelt administration and we had proof of it during the administrations of the late President Harding and President Coolidge when Republicans had too many members of the house and the senate and the Democratic minority was impotent.

I cannot speak from a Republican standpoint any more than I can speak from a Democratic standpoint. Nevertheless, from the position I attempt to follow as an observer of national affairs and long range national policies, it does seem that the Republicans ought to quit fighting among themselves and get together to oppose that which the present minority in this country finds objectionable in President Roosevelt's policies. They ought to determine on a set of principles and stick to them. It is their obligation and if they fail to fulfill that obligation, it seems to me they had best disband, get rid of those who attempt to be leaders in the Republican party and let somebody else organize the minority faction in the United States—and it is to be remembered that even in the last election there were almost 16,000,000 Republican voters.

In advocating this action, I am not motivated as much by my belief in and support of some of Mr. Roosevelt's policies as I am in my disagreement with others of the program to which the New Dealer has adhered.

A strong and vocal minority will insure the retention of rights and powers in the hands of the people where they belong and at the same time it will compel Democrats to stick together in carrying out sound policies proposed by the President.

That latter statement may sound paradoxical. I think it is not. I make the statement because I know how many times the gigantic Democratic majority in congress has fought over trivialities and because I know how many times sincere opposition to unsound policies has met with defeat without the country knowing the reasons for that opposition.

Taken all in all, therefore, I believe it is an obligation upon me as an observer of national affairs to declare in favor of a movement by the minority party that will result in a concentration of its power for the good of the nation.

And what, one may ask, should be the creed of the minority party next year?

Well, as I see the picture, the Republican party must be the conservative party in the United States.

What of the Creed? President Roosevelt and his New Dealers cannot avoid being the radical party. I have said this many times in these columns and it is more evident now even than when I reported upon the situation earlier. The conservatives can and should have a voice in their government even if it is only an opposition voice that constitutes a balance-wheel.

Proceeding from that premise, therefore, there can be little argument that the principles which the Republicans advocate should be drawn from principles of governmental policies that have proved sound. That is to say, the Republicans cannot afford to attack Mr.

Roosevelt on everything he has done, but they can tear him politically limb from limb with constructive proposals to take the place of those things he has done which represent discouragement, deceit and disaster to the country's economic life.

There will be no gain for the Republicans in 1938 elections if they attempt to ride two or three different horses as they did in 1936. For example, they cannot do as Candidate Landon did, to wit, call for a balanced budget in one speech and advocate being Santa Claus in another; they cannot blow hot and cold, and, therefore, they must be either conservative or radical.

It seems to me the Republicans can probably plan for an immediate balancing of the national budget. In that connection, they can with justification demand curtailment, if not entire elimination, of many governmental functions inaugurated under the New Deal. They can offer constructively a proposal to legislate out of existence some 20 or 30 federal agencies for which there never has been and is not now any excuse for their existence.

Another question that is crying for attention is the huge national debt, now at $37,000,000,000, the highest in history. That debt must be reorganized and placed on a basis that will permit gradual liquidation of it. The Roosevelt administration has done nothing regarding the debt except to build it higher and higher.

If the Republican party wants to do a constructive job it ought to set to work to examine all of the statutes enacted by congress in the last ten or twelve years and especially those enacted in the haste of the emergency with a view to repealing of many of them. Some can and should be rewritten to make them workable. Those statutes placed on the books by the Roosevelt administration constitute outstanding evidence of the lack of opposition. We all know many of those bills were written in executive departments and sent to congress with instructions to pass them unchanged. Bad legislation has resulted many times and a checkup surely is indicated.

As regards legislation now on the statute books, it seems to me we will never have sound prosperity until certain laws that increase production costs are eliminated. I mean by this that there are numerous laws which have the effect of widening the spread between the price of the raw materials and the price of the manufactured products. Legislation of this kind is bound to force down the prices paid to the producers and, in my opinion, the results are beginning to be reflected on products of the farm.

Probably the most delicate question with which the Republicans are confronted relates to wages and hours of labor. Business interests have been shortsighted. Too many times employers have overworked their employees and have shown but little consideration for the rights of labor. The result is that labor is demanding consideration in the shape of protection at the hands of its national government and the Republicans, whether they desire to or not, must take a stand.

Among other principles upon which I think the Republicans as the conservative party surely can agree is that there is too much government in business. The government itself is engaged in many lines of commerce and industry and it is breaking down private enterprises in countless ways. I regard the function of government as a thing to be confined to matters and enterprises which individuals cannot do as individuals. We might use the postal service as an example. No one would be so silly as to say that the postal service could be operated satisfactorily in any other way than as an agency of the federal government. In contradistinction to the postal service, however, we can point to such things as the building of model homes for private citizens. I think the government has no business at all in that field. This is so, first, because of the tremendous waste accompanying any governmental operation and, second, for the reason that private persons who are holders of funds whether the amount is great or small recognize real estate mortgages as sound investments. I need not mention the red tape or the politics that can choke up any such thing as a government housing development.

I could go on and mention numerous other general principles upon which there can be honest differences of opinion. It is upon these questions where differences are honest and not created for political reasons that the Republican party should express itself. It ought to do this if it is going to be representative of opposition sentiment.

Lesson for October 31

THE MORAL ISSUE IN THE DRINK PROBLEM

LESSON TEXT—Romans 13:12-14; 1 Corinthians 6:9-11; Galatians 5:16-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh.—Galatians 5:16.

PRIMARY TOPIC—My Neighbors.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Law.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why Is It Wrong to Drink Alcoholic Beverages?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Moral Issue in the Drink Problem.

The title for our lesson is well-chosen—"The Moral Issue in the Drink Problem."

First, let it be clear that there is an issue. Those who have business, social, or political connections with the liquor traffic would like to have us believe that the repeal of prohibition settled the matter once for all. But let us be sure of this fact—the liquor problem is at our very door, and it must be met.

In the second place, many would have us think that the matter of drunkenness is a social, political, or even a physical problem, without any moral implications whatever. But those who are informed know that even the supposedly innocent beer is inextricably tied up with vice and crime. A prisoner in a federal penitentiary writing before prohibition was repealed said, "Criminals hail with delight . . . the return of liquor via the beer route and the greater license that the return of the saloon will inevitably bring. With the return of beer will come open prostitution and gambling." His words were true.

I. Drunkenness Is a Work of Darkness (Rom. 13:12-14).

Just as there are darkness and daylight in the physical universe, so there are two contrasting spiritual realms, of darkness and light.

Men "loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil," according to the Lord Jesus. (See John 3:19.) This spiritual realm of darkness is directed by "rulers of the darkness of this world" (Eph. 6:12), and their purpose is "spiritual wickedness." With the "works of darkness" the believer is to "have no fellowship" (Eph. 5:11), but is to "reprove them" and bring them into the light where their true nature is made manifest (Eph. 5:13). "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all," and those who have fellowship with him "walk in the light." (See I John 1:5-7.)

Drunkenness is a work of darkness. It separates man from God and makes him fear the glorious light of his countenance. The solution for that awful condition is revealed in v. 14. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."

II. Drunkenness Is a Work of Unrighteousness (I Cor. 6:9-11).

No drunkard "shall inherit the kingdom of God" (v. 10), and the man who takes his first drink has put his foot on the path that leads to the drunkard's grave. Of course no man plans to go that far, but the fact is that such is the tragic conclusion for hundreds of thousands of men and women—damned for time and eternity by drink.

Again in this passage we have the answer to our problem. Not reformation, not education, not culture (desirable and useful though we recognize these things to be), but being "washed," "sanctified," and "justified" in "the name of the Lord Jesus and in the Spirit of God." Try that on your town drunkard. Thank God, it works!

III. Drunkenness Is a Work of the Flesh (Gal. 5:16-24).

The flesh—that is our bodies ruled over by self-will as opposed to God's will—is revealed in the Scriptures to be thoroughly bad, and in opposition to God. Consider the appalling list of the works of the flesh in verses 19 and 20. And note that in the midst of them stands drunkenness.

It is the lowest in man that responds to intoxicants. Little wonder that the Brewers' Journal came out right after the election of 1932 with the statement that "not one tenth of one-per cent of American youths know the taste of real beer. We must educate them." In other words the normal taste of an intelligent person would revolt at the stuff, but once give it a chance to stir the lusts of "the flesh" and the victim is caught.

Once again, note the antidote—live in the power of the Holy Spirit, and the flesh with its lusts is crucified (v. 24). How shall we have the Holy Spirit and his power in our lives? By taking the Lord Jesus Christ as personal Saviour.

Words Without Action

Few men suspect how much mere talk fritters away spiritual energy—that which should be spent in action, spends itself in words.

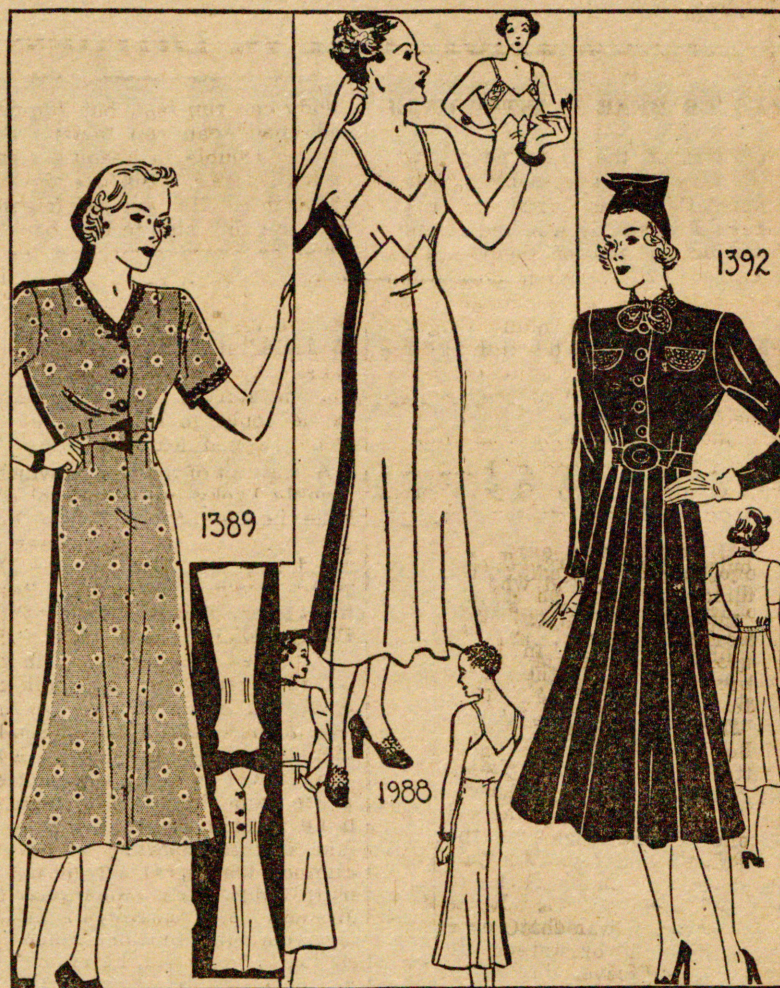

Killing Time

People partial to this crime of killing time might be pardoned if they'll only kill their own.

Kindness

Kindness is a language the dumb can speak, and the deaf can hear and understand.—Bovee.

A Trio of Triumphs

THE way to day-in, day-out chic for the woman who sews is shown in today's attractive new three-way plan. It goes deeper than the surface, you see, in the presentation of a sleek new slip. Ah, and it gives great thought to the surface, too, as you can't help but note in the two wing-side models. This is one triangle every woman who sews should want to know all about.

Spicy New Model.

As shipshape as a Parisian streamline fashion and, in its own role, as important—that's the little number at the left above. It does wonders to give one that up and doing feeling that's handy to have around the house in the morning. You can repeat it time and again without fear of being repetitious; without losing your fondness for it. Anything in gay cotton: shantung, print, gingham, crash, will do nicely for this one.

A Congenial Slip.

Beneath a well-groomed surface hangs a perfect fitting slip! That's an old and honest notion and one Sew-Your-Own abides by religiously. Today's five piece version is as easy to put together as it is congenial to your comfort and outward superbness. Make two while you're about it: one with a plain top for everyday, the other with a bit of frou-frou for dress-up occasions.

Deft Design.

The "girl in the little green hat" wears a dress with many tucks in this her latest picture. It is the dress for you, Milady, to star in at familiar Fall festivities. Deftly but definitely it gives you emphasis where you want it; soft pedals worry-areas. No more willing and able frock than this was ever designed and it can be yours so easily. Thin wool is a smart material and it fits this frock's personality to a T. Let's sew and be seen places this Fall. Okay?

The Patterns.

Pattern 1389 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material, or 4½ yards, with long sleeves.

Pattern 1988 is designed in sizes 34 to 46. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1 yard of ribbon for shoulder straps, and 1½ yards of edging for finishing upper edge.

Pattern 1392 is designed for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 54-inch fabric.

BEAR ME STORIES

by Thornton W. Burgess

BUSTER BEAR IS INTRODUCED

NONE of the little people who were there ever will forget how Buster Bear was introduced in the Green Forest. It was the funniest introduction any of them can remember. They laugh now whenever they think of it, though at the time some of them didn't laugh at all. No, indeed! The truth is some of them were too frightened to see anything funny. You see, it happened like this:

Jimmy Skunk had met Buster Bear up by the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest and he had made Buster Bear get out of his way. Peter Rabbit had seen him do it, and of course Peter had told every one he met. Every one had expressed a great deal of admiration for Jimmy Skunk until Peter came to Prickly Porky the Porcupine. Prickly Porky had said that it was nothing to make Buster Bear get out of the way and that he would do the same thing if some one would invite Buster Bear to come down where he was. Jumper the Hare had offered to go invite Buster Bear and Reddy Fox had planned to prevent Jumper ever getting near Buster Bear. So Reddy had hidden where he could jump out at Jumper and perhaps catch him. Along had come Jumper, and just as Reddy was getting ready to spring he had heard a step behind him and had turned to look right straight in the face of Buster Bear!

"I've Brought My Old Friend Buster Bear to Introduce Him," Said Jumper.

Now, Reddy Fox is a coward. He always has been a coward. Perhaps he can't help it, but anyway he is a coward. When he saw who it was behind him he gave one frightened yelp and then he put his tail between his legs and he started for home faster than ever he had run before.

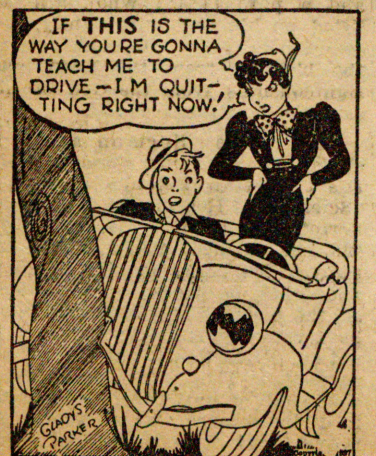

The minute Reddy started to run Jumper the Hare started after him.

It's Clark Gable

Reddy can run fast, but Jumper as you know, can run faster. So he had no trouble in keeping right at Reddy's heels. But Reddy didn't know this. He was so frightened that he didn't stop to look back, and when he heard some one just behind him he thought it was Buster Bear, and tried to run harder. As for Buster Bear himself, he was so tickled at the sight of Reddy Fox chased by timid Jumper the Hare that he started after them as fast as he could go so as to see what would happen next.

At the foot of the tree in which sat Prickly Porky, were several of the little people of the Green Forest gossiping about Buster Bear and wondering if Jumper the Hare really would invite Buster Bear to meet them. No one excepting Prickly Porky believed he would. Prickly Porky knew Jumper better than the others because they had both come from the same Great Woods to live in the Green Forest. Suddenly there was a great racket. Everybody looked up to see what it meant. There came Reddy Fox running as if he thought his very last minute had come and right at his heels was Jumper the Hare! It looked just as if Reddy was running away from Jumper, and everybody shouted with laughter. Reddy didn't stop. Oh, my no! He kept right on. But Jumper stopped.

"I've brought my old friend, Buster Bear, to introduce him," said Jumper, and as he spoke with a great huffing and puffing, Buster Bear himself came crashing into their midst.

ter Bear, to introduce him," said Jumper, and as he spoke with a great huffing and puffing, Buster Bear himself came crashing into their midst.

All the laughter stopped right then and there. You never, never did see such a frightened scampering! Unc' Billy Possum and Happy Jack Squirrel got in each other's way as they tried to climb the same tree. Striped Chipmunk tried to crawl into a hole too small for him. Bobby Coon fell backward from an old stump on which he was sitting. Only Jimmy Skunk and Prickly Porky seemed unafraid. Buster Bear sat up and his little eyes twinkled and he grinned broadly as he said: "I'm ever so glad to meet you and I hope we'll get better acquainted when you are not in such a hurry." © T. W. SPOON BREAD IS ALWAYS POPULAR

Water-Ground Corn Meal Gives It Perfect Touch.

By EDITH M. BARBER

NO MATTER how much you may enjoy a meal as a whole, there is usually one dish which furnishes the highlight and therefore, stands out in your memory. At least, I find that this is the case. It was spoon bread which one of my friends gave us for Sunday supper and which heightened our enjoyment of the baked ham, deviled eggs, the hot biscuits and the green salad which our host mixed himself with a deft hand.

When I questioned Alice-from-Virginia, the cook, I found, as I had suspected, that old-fashioned water-ground corn meal had done its part in producing a perfect spoon bread than which there is nothing better. Of course, as the French say about spinach, it is death to butter.

Corn meal of this type is appreciated in some places of the North as well as it is in the South.

Up in Rhode Island the wheels of an old mill are turning again to produce the principal ingredient of the famous griddle-baked Johnny cake for which that state is famous. The title, by the way, is a corruption of the word "journey," upon many of which these cakes of corn meal furnished the only supplement to the fish from the streams and the game from the forests.

Spoon Bread.

- 1½ tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 cups water ground corn meal
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 cups milk
- 2 eggs, beaten lightly
- 2 teaspoons baking powder

Mix butter, sugar and salt with the meal, scald with boiling water and add milk, well beaten eggs and baking powder. Pour into buttered baking pan and cook slowly, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, for forty-five minutes.

Johnny Cakes.

- 1 cup water ground corn meal
- Boiling water
- 1 tablespoon melted butter
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- Scald corn meal with enough boiling water to make a drop batter. Stir in melted butter and salt. Mix until very smooth. Drop batter from spoon in dabs onto hot greased griddle. When brown on one side, turn over and brown on the other.

Scalloped Potatoes and Eggs.

- 2 hard-boiled eggs
- 2 cups diced cooked potatoes
- ½ cup minced ham
- 1½ cups white sauce
- ¾ cup bread crumbs
- 1 tablespoon butter

Slice the eggs and arrange in a baking dish in alternate layers with the diced potatoes. Sprinkle each layer with minced ham and cover with white sauce. Sprinkle the top with crumbs, dot with butter and bake in a moderate oven until the crumbs are brown.

Nut Wafers.

- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1½ cups brown sugar
- 1 egg
- 2 tablespoons water
- ¾ cup flour
- ½ cups chopped nuts.

Cream butter, stir in sugar, add egg and water. Add flour mixed with nuts. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a baking sheet, greased with an unsalted fat or oil, at least two inches apart. Bake about seven minutes in a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, until brown. Remove from oven, let stand half a minute

MANNERS OF THE MOMENT

By JEAN

I DON'T know why it's considered so terrible to drop a hairpin into one's soup. But that's neither here nor there, for from all that we can gather dropping hairpins into soup just isn't right. Sometimes, however, a hairpin drops from an animated head without warning. And then the big problem is what to do about it.

If you're lucky you may have a gay young blade sitting beside you who can think up a smart quip about tin in the soup instead of soup in the tin, or something like that, and you can retrieve your hairpin under a cloud of merriment. If, however, your dinner partner hasn't seen the catastrophe it's best to try to continue sipping your soup as though nothing had happened. Then you can keep your eye on him until he starts gesticulating with his soup spoon to some one on the other side. That is your moment. With a swift motion you can then pull the hairpin out. And if some one catches you at it just say it's a habit with you. You always have to get the cherry out of the bottom of the glass. WNU Service.

out into the hall along the ceiling. The ceiling plaster being comparatively cool, there was condensation against it, and it was this dampening of the calcimine that caused peeling. One possible cure was to put a ventilator in an upper part of one of the kitchen windows; an electric fan to draw the kitchen air outdoors. Another was to replace the calcimine on the ceiling with enamel or with waterproof paint.

Condensation is a very usual reason for the peeling of calcimine and paint on ceilings. It is particularly likely on upstairs ceilings under an unheated attic. The ceilings are cold, moisture in the air condenses against them, and peeling follows. This moisture may come from kitchen and laundry work, from steam from hot baths and showers, from over-use of a humidifier and other causes.

The pattern of lath, so often seen on upstairs ceilings, is one effect of condensation. Moisture picked up by the plaster, dries off quickly in the spaces between laths, but much less quickly in the plaster over a lath; dust collects and is held by the dampness, and the pattern of the lathing becomes evident.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Crazy Patch Work at Home in a Modern Setting.

THE crazy patch is the oldest of quilt patterns, yet there is something amazingly modern in its angular lines. So whether your living room is traditional in style or newer than tomorrow you will be interested in the revival of crazy patch work for what our grandmothers and great-grandmothers called a "slumber throw."

A corner of one of these old silk crazy quilts is shown here at the lower right. The pieces were small—many not more than 1½ inches wide or long. A variety of embroidery stitches joins the pieces. Both plain and figured silks were used, the plain patches often being embroidered with flowers, fans and other amusing motifs—note the beetle embroidered on one patch. Several colors of silk embroidery thread were generally used but in the most artistic of these quilts one color predominated in the embroidery.

Larger patches with simple feather stitch and herring-bone stitch at the joinings also give a good effect. The pieces are sewed to a foundation of some firm soft material. Outing flannel or an old wool blanket are good. Pin a piece in place over the space to be filled, trim the edges to the right shape, as at A, allowing enough to turn under, as at B, where the patch laps over the one next to it. Baste the turned edges down as shown. When a number of patches have been basted in place, sew them down to the foundation with the embroidery stitches and then remove the bastings. The backing is tied to the front with silk embroidery thread as comforters are tied. Little or no padding may be used and a plain band around the edge is effective.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Tinley Civic Club News

Dear Bill:

It certainly was too bad that you were confined indoors, due to your attack of "suitcase sickness" commonly known as the gripe and that you had to miss out on the regular meeting of our Civics Club which was held in the Tinley Park public school building last Monday evening at 8 p. m.

We really had a grand turnout of members as could be witnessed by the large number of cars parked outside of the building. It looked like Oak Park Ave., did at the time we held the parade of the "Days of 49."
Of course many of the members including myself, left our benzine wagons at home and used the well-known "shoemaker's dummy" as a means of locomotion.

Say, fellow, judging by the turnout and bunch of new applications for membership in the club that were submitted at this meeting, the club is really growing by leaps and bounds and you had better get after those two good friends of yours that want to join our club and get their applications for membership in as soon as possible because I have a sneaking idea that sometime in the near future the membership fees or assessments might possibly be raised to conform with the club's expansion program.

The meeting itself, was quite lengthy as we had a great deal of business to transact including the purchase and installation of desks
for a new classroom in the school.
Of course you know, Bill, without my repeating it again, that this project is only one of the many that will come up before the club in the future, wherein the club is in a position to lend a helping hand to the community in general, and if the club members continue in that spirit of co-operation shown since the club was organized, both within the membership itself and in civic affairs, we, as a club can certainly become a valuable asset to this community.

Before I forget it, Bill, you were appointed as a new member of the transportation committees commonly known as Elmore and his Stooges.
This will give you a chance to hammer with the rest of the committee for bigger and better railroad and bus transportation for this community. By the results that the committee on transportation have gotten for the town already, in improved transportation facilities, it sure shows that they have been on the job.

Gee, Bill, I really was scared for a few minutes last night at the meeting. It seems as though president O'Neil had obtained a list of members that were in arrears in dues and I had a guilty feeling. I thought for a minute that the prexie was going to read the list 'cause it reminded me that the last dues I had paid, were paid in August and that was more than the two month grace that the club allows us. He kept looking at me while checking the delinquent list so I sneaked up behind him after the meeting was over and paid us. However he didn't read the list aloud. He is a diplomat.

Well, Bill, I've touched the high spots of the meeting so you wouldn't miss anything even if you couldn't be there and I hope you can get rid of that cold by hook or crook so that you won't fail to be among those present at our next meeting.
Sincerely, your pal, C. I. VICS.

TINLEY PARK

John G. Bettenhausen underwent an appendicitis operation in the St.
Francis hospital, Blue Island last Sunday afternoon.

Miss Lauraetta Keuch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Keuch, underwent an operation the past week
for appendicitis.

George Schreiber is recovering
nicely from injuries he recently sustained when he was struck by an automobile while crossing Western Avenue in Blue Island.

Work on remodeling the interior of the former Tinley Park drug store is to be begun next Monday. A new drug store, said to be a Walgreen system store, is scheduled to open about November 10th.

Mrs. Louis Schreiber who is a patient in the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island, is somewhat improved.

Hirsch Bros., are having the finishing touches put to the interior of their new funeral home in the former Scheer building on Oak Park avenue. An informal opening is to be held a week from this Saturday.

Fire, supposedly caused by a motor, brought out the Tinley Park fire department to the farm house on the former Davis farm southeast of Tinley last Friday morning. The blaze was quickly put out and only nominal damage resulted.

The first of the new talking movies to be shown in Tinley Park
every Saturday night, were shown last Saturday night in the Tinley Park public school to a fair sized crowd.

TINLEY PARK GARDEN CLUB

Since leaving Tinley Park I have not been as active in my work for the Garden Club, and this rather bothered me; so one day a plan came to me that altho I did not live there,
it would be possible for me to do my bit.

I decided to become chairman for the Better Homes and Gardens and send in renewals for our members, the commissions awarded on these subscriptions have been turned into our Garden Club treasury.

There is a special offer of Better Homes and Gardens and McCall's Magazine and if any flower lover would like to take advantage of this special price, please call Mrs. Chas.
Nielsen and she will explain the offer.

This offer expires very soon so please let Mrs. Nielsen know at once. I appreciate your kindness by placing an order.

Sincerely,
MRS. R. J. HUG.

Tinley Park Unit No. 615

The American Legion Auxiliary

On October 22nd, 1937, Tinley Park Unit No. 615 held its regular meeting, also a Halloween Party,
very fine cup cakes, orange juice
and favors were served and bunco was played. The hostesses were Viola Carr, Frances Ceithaml and Ruth Cushman.

Mae Leach, the Eighth District Director attended the meeting and gave an interesting outline of the year's work.

On December 9th a card and bun-
co party is to be held at the Tinley Park school auditorium. Proceeds are to be used for the hospital, child welfare and Christmas baskets in our community.

All officers and members are asked to attend the Caravan meeting on Friday, Nov. 5th at the LaSalle Hotel, time 9:30, lasting all day. All chairmen are to attend to get their year's work outlined.

For further information get in touch with the president, Mamie Brandau.

The next meeting of the Auxiliary is Friday, Nov. 12 at 8 o'clock and will be at the home Mamie Brandau.

Any member wishing to go should get in touch with members who have cars.

Let every member make a special effort to attend this meeting.

World Traveler To Speak At Zion Luth. Church

Think of it. Figures indicate that approximately 80,000 girls and 200,000 boys run away every year.
40,000 girls and 35,000 boys are never seen again by their parents.

Mr. Livingston comes with the best of references from pastors of all denominations. With millions of men totally unemployed and numberless men and youths tramping aimlessly from place to place, this address will prove most interesting.
He reveals the tricks of tramps, the marking of homes, etc. Rarely ever is a woman vagrant met with. Every family is taxed $5 aiding worthless,
if not dangerous, wandering beggars.
Mr. Livingston teaches how to distinguish the unfortunate man who is honestly in search of employment,
from vagabonds who not spread foul if not deadly diseases, but educate harmless young runaways in acts of crime. Be sure to hear this dynamic speaker at Zion Lutheran church on Monday, Nov. 1st at 7:45 p. m.

Red Coral Always Prized

It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and secrets not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the
"magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off
the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italians.

Bath for Elephants

A favorite spectacle in Ceylon is to be seen at Katugastota, where the elephant's bath. The beasts are working elephants and take a shower bath after each day's work. They provide their shower with their trunk.

COMMUNITY BIBLE SCHOOL Held in Ann Rutledge School Lincoln Estates Illinois

Sunday School 10:00 a. m.

We invite you to enjoy the blessings of these hours of worship with us.

Sunday Oct. 31 is International Temperance Sunday.

It is good neither to eat flesh or to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth. Rom. 14:21 Temperance is essential not only for physical welfare but also for social good. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.

What then can be said of the nation which tries to drink itself to prosperity?

Fleshly lusts war against the soul they also war against the mind and body. The tragic waste of intemperance is weakened mind, diseased bodies and lost soul, quite a price for a good time.

Intemperance means Health of body strength of mind, clarity of vision, love of fellow men, a conscience of mind that you are living close to Jesus. Christians should live separate from sin because sin and salvation have nothing in common they are forever apart. A christian may have a secret sin in their life whereby they fool other Christians but they do not fool God

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Services in the St. Peter Evangelical Church last Sunday were well attended. Visitors from all neighboring churches helped to make the day successful. The entire community should have received a blessing from the eventful occasion of the 70th anniversary of the congregation as well as the rededication of the altar and its appurtenances, the cross and candles, baptismal font, pulpit and the organ.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Hohenstein was baptized last Sunday October 24, in the St. Peter Evangelical church by the pastor, the Rev. G. S. Gerhold. The name given was, James Robert. The sponsors were Mr. Christ Hohenstein and Mr. Robert Hohenstein. This will be a noted event in the child's life for it has the honor of being the first child baptized from the new baptismal font and also because it took place on the 70th anniversary of the congregation.

The Frankfort band has added new members to its organization. They are: Betty and Lambert Vollrath, Charlene Folkers, Clark Jr., and Barbara Bennett, Shirley Weichbrodt, Howard Jones, Wilbur Hossbach, Walter Carlson Jr., Kathryn Lambrecht, Loretta Reimers, Dale Warning. Mr. Peters is the instructor and rehearsals are held every Tuesday night at 6:30.

Mrs. Kathrine Bankow of Joliet is visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Minger this week.

The Frankfort grade school are busy practicing basketball. All fans are looking forward for announcements of games.

The pupils of both grade and high school are enjoying a holiday today because the teachers are attending institute.

Mrs. Kathrine Lankenau and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lambrecht and family left this morning to spend the week end in Dearborn, Mich., with the Floyd Lankenau family.

The Ladies Aid society of the Evangelical church met Wednesday for a devotional and business meeting. No coffee was served because of the nearness of the chicken supper to be held November 4. The next coffee will be held November 18.

Mrs. Chas. Bobzin is ill in her home. May she soon enjoy health again. That is the wish of the community.

A linen shower was given in honor of Miss Ruby Heisner in the home of Miss Dorothea Eisenbrandt. The home was beautifully decorated in the bride's colors, blue and gold. Many lovely gifts were received.

Another shower honoring Miss Heisner was given by the Epworth League of the Methodist church in the church parlors. It was a pantry shower. A very enjoyable evening was had.

The fellow-workers of the Eleanor Lodge also honored Miss Heisner recently. They presented her with a breakfast set and other kitchen items.

A very pretty wedding took place last Saturday October 23 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Heisner when their daughter Ruby became the bride of Mr. Harold McArthur of Plainfield. The ceremony was performed at six o'clock in the evening with Rev. C. F. Schellhase, pastor of the Frankfort Methodist church officiating.

The bride was beautifully dressed in blue velvet and carried white roses. She was attended by her sister, Irene, who wore a gown of wine colored velvet. Mr. Ralph Clayton of Missouri, a cousin of the groom was best man. A wedding dinner was served following the service, to 70 guests. Mr. and Mrs. McArthur will live in Plainfield.

Mrs. Kathrine Lankenau found that some people must have been very cold as her wood pile has become smaller. Let others take the advice and protect their wood pile, so they will not have the same misfortune. Isn't it too bad, that it is the truth, that the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal" is forgotten by some?

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Gross of Chicago were guests in the L. Krusemark home the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Lapp of Detroit, Michigan spent last Saturday in the F. Whitlark home.

Pageant "Luther The Liberator" To Be Shown Oct. 31

The Lutheran Churches in this vicinity thru the efforts of the Walther League, their young people's group, is assisting the Northern Illinois District of its organization in presenting "Luther, the Liberator." This great dramatic pageant of the Reformation period in the church's history will be given in two performances, one at 3 p. m. and another at 8 p. m. Sunday October 31, the 420th anniversary, to the date, of the historic liberation of the church. Both performances will be presented in the beautiful Civic Opera House in Chicago by a cast of 500 people and with an assisting chorus of 300 voices. All of the personnel for the appearance is from the ranks of the young people's groups of the Lutheran Churches in the Chicago area.

All seats are reserved, and may be purchased thru the local society presidents of the neighboring Lutheran Churches or direct from the ticket sale headquarters, Ernst Kaufmann, Inc., 209 S. State St., Room 1030, Chicago. The range of prices for all seats is $1.00 for the entire main floor and the first five rows of the balcony; 75c for the remainder of the balcony; and 50c for the entire second balcony. Both performances are identical, and the prices prevail for both. Mail orders are accepted.

The producer of this gigantic undertaking is Geo. G. Speyer, 7347 N. Paulina Ave., Chicago. In charge of the music and chorus is Walter L. Sasmannshausen, 5220 Pensacola Ave., Chicago. The part of Martin Luther, whose life and times are so ably portrayed thru out the entire story, is played by Wm. Zeiter, 4121 N. Henderson St., Chicago, while the character of the Pope, Leo X, arch-enemy of Luther, is very ably played by Geo. E. Cramer president of the Northern Illinois District Walther League who resides in Wilmette.

Most of the music which so filled Luther's life and which the Church of today, and not only the Lutheran Church, has as an heritage, will be the contribution of the mass chorus of 300 voices. Assisting the chorus as soloists will be Myrtle Weirauch Gehle 2748 Logan Blvd., Chicago; Elfrieda Miller 1036 Bonnie Brae, River Forest, and Gertrude Gressens, 6211 Grace St. Chicago.

The accompanists to the chorus and for the incidental scenes will be Erhardt Bergstrasser, Music Director at Roosevelt High School, who lives at 1420 Edgewater Ave. and Sigfred Matson, 2506 N. Sayre Ave., Chicago who will be at the Pianos while the accompanists at the organ consoles will be Edna Pflantz, 5345 Pensacola Ave., and Carl Kozcek, 1039 W. 97th St., Chicago.

The story of the pageant unfolds itself in four gigantic episodes and thru the medium of 18 colorful scenes. All of the Opera Co.s, scenery and costumes is at the disposal of the cast; rehearsals have been in progress for over a month for both cast and chorus. All of this activity to bring to all who attend two and one-half hours of educational entertainment that will carry the audience thru the perilous years of the Reformation period, over 400 years ago, and unfold the life and times of Dr. Martin Luther, that lowly monk, whose conscience gave him no rest until he found peace in the Bible and posted his historic 95 Theses on the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg, Germany, October 31, 1517. The author of this religious pageant is Herbert F. Kuenne, and it was first presented in Baltimore, Md., in 1922. Last year, a sell-out performance was presented in the Civic Opera House Chicago, by the Lutheran Publicity Association. Any and all profit will go toward the educational, charitable and religious program of the Northern Illinois District Walther League.

Pilot Whale Not Dangerous

The pilot whale is not dangerous like its close relation, the killer whale. A full-grown specimen is usually not more than 20 feet in length; it is nearly black all over, and is sometimes known as the black fish. On the throat there is a whitish heart-shaped patch, which sometimes extends to a very narrow strip down the center of the under parts.

American Boy Adventure Stories Have Appeal

Readers who like adventure and the lure of far places will find plenty to please them in coming issues of THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine. They'll read, for instance, of seamen and sabotage and San Francisco water-front trouble; of daring adventure in the world of pseudo-science, and of a feul aboard a plunging, rolling battleship.

They'll read too, of excitement aboard a transport plane blaring over jungled Mexican mountains, and of stranger planes that are not bound to earth but swing through the noiselessness of space. Readers can follow a young ex-Mountie as he searches for clues in the wild northlands, and Tierney, the pie-eating detective, on the trail of city criminals.

A new feature in The AMERICAN BOY is picture pages that tell stories. Pictures, for instance, that vividly show a day in the life of a coast guardsman, and how an Eskimo husky sled dog does his work. They transmit the thrill of battling a hundred pound, water-churning tarpon. Tips on how it's done are also given pictorially—ranging from how to run a broken field to how to be correct in a ballroom!

NOTE: Subscription prices of The AMERICAN BOY will be raised in the near future. Send your subscription order at once to take advantage of the bargain rates now in effect: one year at $1.00 or three years at $2.00. Foreign subscriptions 50c a year extra. Send your name, address and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. On newsstands the price is 15c a copy.

Chicago Plans Big Stock Show

Farmers and stockmen from many states, several Canadian provinces, as well as from Australia, South Africa, and South America have thus far listed entries of livestock and crops for the 1937 International Live Stock Exposition.

The exposition will be held in the new International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards, November 27th to December 4th.

Predict Record Entry
According to Secretary-Manager B. H. Heide, the early entry is the heaviest in the history of the show, which leads him to predict that this year's event will be a record one in number of exhibits. There were over 14,000 head of livestock shown at the 1936 exposition.

It will be the 38th annual renewal of this largest exposition of farm and crops on the continent. Prizes will total over $100,000, distributed over the contests which will feature all breeds of beef cattle, draft and light horses and ponies, sheep, and swine.

Spectacular horse shows will take place every evening from the opening to the closing days. The finest riding and driving horses and ponies in this country and Canada will be seen in contest for prize ribbons in these events.

Big Crops Exhibit
The world's largest crops exhibit, the International Grain and Hay Show, will be held for the 19th time in connection with the exposition. Growers from 37 states, Canada, and Australia took part in this contest last year. The management expects an even wider and more extensive display of exhibits this year because of the good crop yields in most sections of the continent.
Special low round trip fares have already been scheduled for the week of the exposition by many of the railroads entering Chicago to accommodate the thousands who will visit this premier annual showing of the nation's livestock and farming industries.

2 Cars, New Truck in 1938 Ford Line

An advance showing of 1938 Ford V-8 cars and trucks opened Wednesday afternoon at the Ford Metropolitan showrooms at 1710 Broadway in New York city.

Two distinct Ford V-8 cars, differing in appearance, appointments and price, were presented. One was the de luxe Ford V-8, the other the standard Ford V-8.

The standard car is designed for owners to whom economy in first cost and operating cost is paramount. The de luxe car provides added luxury and style for those who desire them.

Both cars have the same V-8 chassis. The eight de luxe types are available only with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine, the three standard types with either the 85 or 60 horsepower engine.

The de luxe is a stylish sister of the standard. It is entirely new in appearance. The radiator grille is of new design. Appearance of the hood is longer and more sweeping. Fenders are massive. Interior appointments are in keeping with the styling of the exterior. Substantially more room in the closed sedans, greater passenger comfort and much larger luggage space are provided.

The standard V-8 cars reveal new styling, with a different radiator grille design, long hood and flowing contours. The spacious interiors are roomy and attractively upholstered and appointed.

In addition to the two passenger cars, Ford is to present an expanded line of V-8 trucks and commercial cars. Both are newly styled to lend added "eye appeal" in commercial transportation.

A new group of "one-tonner" trucks also is offered, in addition to the 112-inch commercial cars and the 134-inch and 157-inch wheelbase trucks.

The new "one-tonner" is designed specifically to bridge the gap between the commercial cars and the truck groups. Available with either 85 horsepower or 60, it is expected to make the economies of the latter engine more widely available in commercial transportation.

Other advances for 1938 are the new 134-inch wheelbase truck, replacing the 131½-inch wheelbase in the big truck line, a new frame width for the 134-inch and 157-inch wheel base units, improved brakes and easier steering and stronger construction thro

Will County Vigilantes To Hold Benefit Ball

The Will County Vigilantes Association will hold an entertainment and county police ball in the Chamber of Commerce ballroom, Joliet on Monday evening, December 13. This is the first of a series of activities planned by the association in their endeavor to raise funds for the installation of a county-wide police radio system.

The association was organized by a group of civic minded county, industrial and organization leaders. The object of this association is to furnish the various law enforcement agencies of the county with a county-wide police radio system.

The plans call for a system such as is in operation in LaSalle and in some of the other neighboring counties. With such a system, greater cooperation is possible between the various law enforcing agencies of these organizations.

Elmer Brockway, president of the Musician's Union, is the chairman of the county police ball committee. He and other committee members hope to make this ball one of the biggest entertainments of the season. There are now over 200 active and honorary members in the association.

R. A. Brown, secretary of the association, reports that these members are scattered thruout the entire county and a complete list of the same will be published in next week's issue of this paper.

The original committee members are as follows:

D. H. Lentz, Commissioner, Joliet; Nicholas Fornango, Chief of Police, Joliet; Joseph Kuhar, Village President, Rockdale; L. P. Taylor, Village President, Plainfield; Michael J. Breen, Sheriff Will County; Howard Klett, President F Men's organization; Fred Lindner, Chief of Police, Lockport; Stanley Ratkowski, Commissioner, Steger; Michael Kloss, Chief of Police, Steger; C. Safety In Limelight

Safety will be much in the limelight by reason of a contest sponsored by the Keep Chicago Safe Committee headed by Mayor Edward J. Kelly among high school students of the city. Prize-winning safety posters and slogans, the work of the pupils, will be on display.

Chicago will become the motor capital of America during show week, with factory chiefs and dealers converging upon the city from all parts of the nation. They have found from past experience that the Chicago Automobile Show, peer of them all, is something not to be missed. Important meetings are scheduled by those in the trade.

In addition to being the most spectacular of all automobile shows, the Chicago classic will attract by far the largest crowds of any. Preparations are being made to handle a half million visitors for a new all-time record. The International Amphitheatre, a modern, well lighted, well ventilated building, contains 255,000 square feet of floor space, so that the manufacturers can show their complete lines and educational features. Furthermore, there is room within the exposition grounds for 10,000 motor cars, with free parking under protection.

Adapted Seeds Will Be Required

Will county farmers who are casting about for supplies of red clover, alfalfa and other legume seed are advised by Farm Adviser L. W. Braham that provisions regarding the use of adapted seed of such crops under the 1938 agricultural conservation program will be similar to regulations governing the use of such seeds under the 1937 program.

A feature of the proposed 1938 program provides for the establishment of a soil-building goal for each farm and soil building practices which may be used in achieving this goal, he explained. One of the proposed practices is the seeding of perennial and biennial legumes.

New seedlings of red clover or alfalfa or mixtures containing these seeds will be counted toward achieving any 1938 soil building goal only if made with adapted seeds, it has been pointed out by C. R. Wickard, director of the north central division of the AAA.

You Wouldn't Have Time for All This Reading . . .

Every American wants to know more about the building of his nation than the schoolbook histories tell him, but few of us have time to pore over the many volumes necessary for that.

The illustrated feature articles by Elmo Scott Watson which appear regularly in this paper offer an answer to that need.

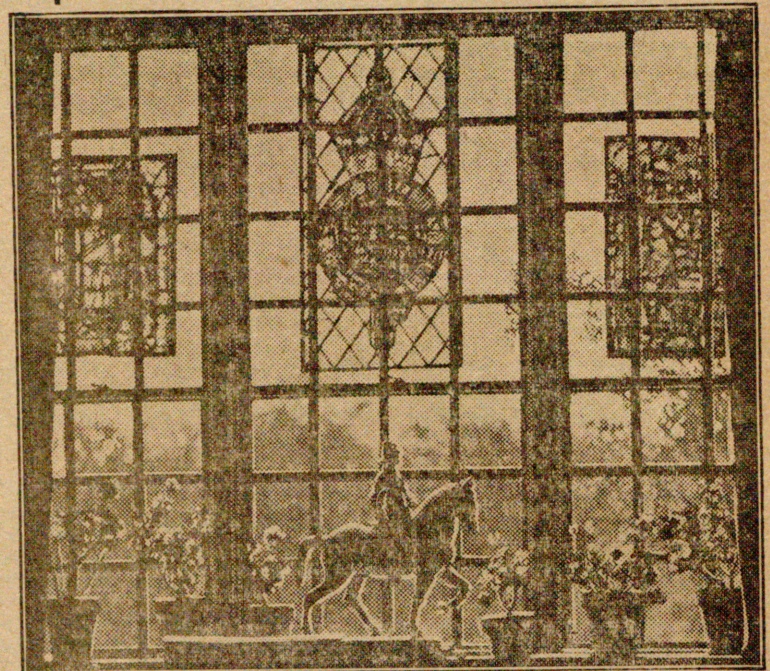

You will find in them a wealth of interesting information on little-known chapters in American history—fact stories more fascinating than fiction. These articles also cover other fields—popular science, sports, industry, the fine arts and literature; in fact, every phase of American interest. This newspaper considers itself fortunate in being able to give its readers such articles as these by one of the leading feature writers of the country today. Tell your friends about them if they haven't seen them yet.

TO SCHOOL CHILDREN:

Teachers find these articles helpful in classes. Some students are making scrapbooks of them. Tell your teacher and your classmates about them!

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

HOW UNUSUAL!

A picture snapped from inside the house and through a window often proves to be a fascinating bit of work.

IT'S almost unbelievable but it is true that many amateur snapshooters have the notion that it is only the unusual that is worthwhile snapping. When they travel, a camera is taken along to get pictures of new scenes and new faces but they use it around their homes only on special occasions.

"But," you may say, "I've already made good snaps around the house. What else is there to shoot?"

Nobody can answer that question for you directly. But it's dollars to doughnuts that there are dozens of untouched picture possibilities. And all of them interesting as the ones already in your album.

The secret of finding them is simply a matter of keeping your eyes open. Get the habit of looking at things—everything—as though you had never seen them before. It's amazing the way this habit will sharpen your interest—now dulled by sheer familiarity—in even the most commonplace things.

Some of the finest pieces of photographic art have been results of appreciative eyes in the heads of stay-at-homes. The pattern of sun and shade on the front steps, the fascinating interplay of roof lines, tree portraits—are typical of pictures that may be made at home—unusual pictures of usual subjects.

Don't be afraid of doing things differently. It's a tonic to tackle old subjects from new points of view. If, to get a shot that appeals to you, you have to upset the "laws" of safe-and-sane snapping, don't hesitate. If your eye enjoys the scene, whatever it is, the chances are that your camera will enjoy it too.

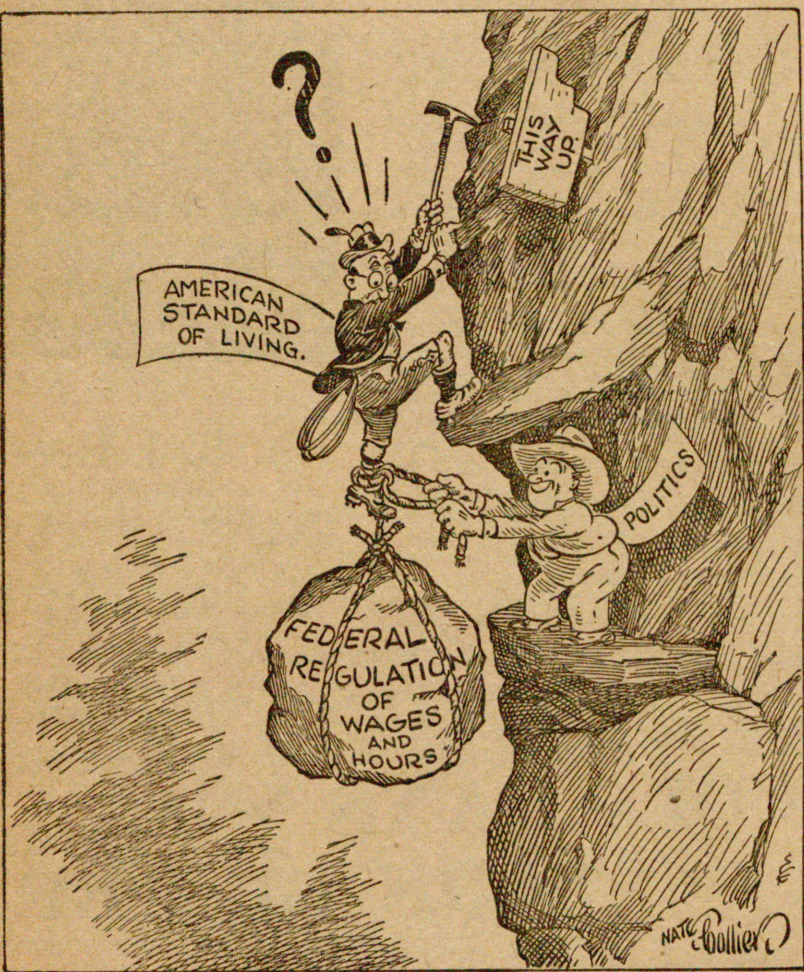

With such helps as the inexpensive photo-flood bulbs (for which efficient reflectors are available) you can do your snapping indoors as well as out. Present-day cameras, films and lights give you unlimited scope for your snapping. Today almost any picture is possible—and at any time.

Of all words of praise for the snapshooter, the sweetest are these, spoken by a friend:—"Well, would you look at that! I've seen that spot every day for the last fifteen years and I never dreamed it had the makings of a picture like this."

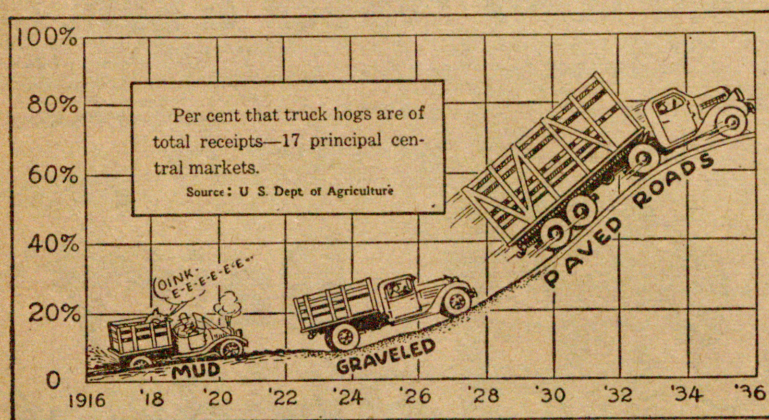

Maybe you've heard these words already! Congratulations!

HELPING THE MOUNTAIN CLIMBER

Trend in Receipts of Hogs by Motor Truck

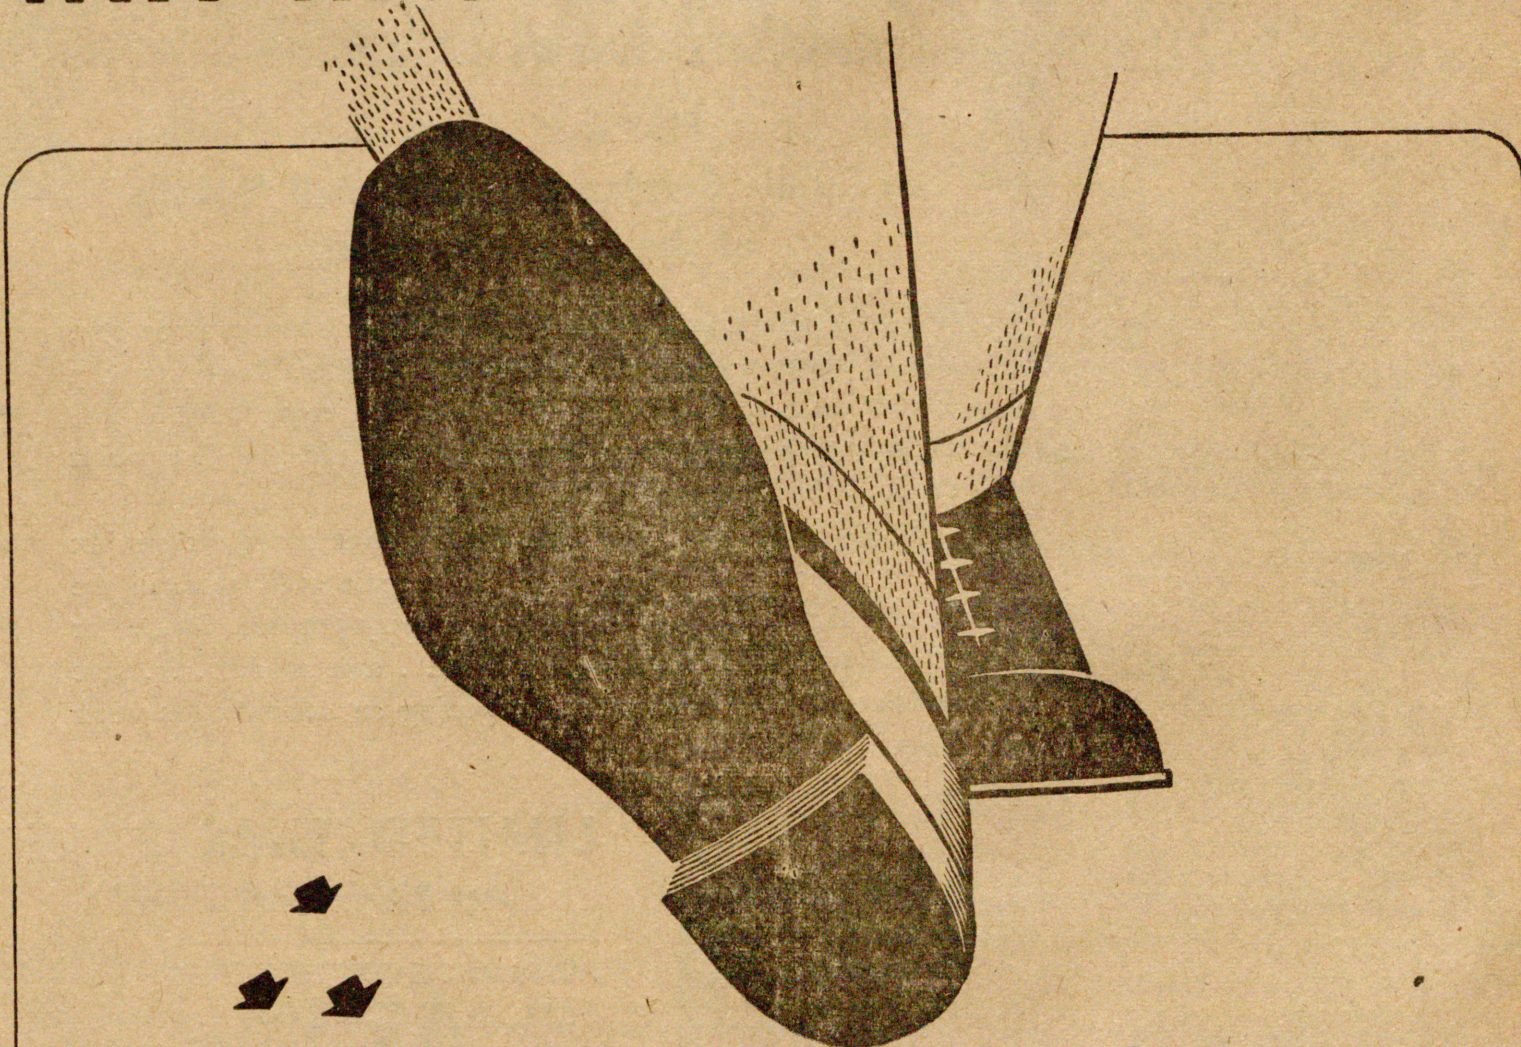

An indication of the growth and significance of the motor truck in the movement of livestock to market is shown in the graph above. Beginning at zero in 1916, the percentage of "drive-ins" of hogs (truck receipts) at the 17 principal central markets has steadily increased, mounting to better than 80% in 1936.

The capacity, speed, and flexibility of movement of the modern motor truck, the increased mileage of all-weather roads, the marked advances in the completion of connecting highways, and the convenience of pickup service at the farm are some of the reasons for increased use of trucks for the comparatively shorter haul. However, longer hauls to more distant markets are still being made almost entirely by railroad. Of the livestock received at the 17 central markets, about one-third requires a further haul, either as slaughter or as stocker and feeder livestock. Such shipments are usually made by rail. Probably an even greater percentage of the total receipts at the interior markets are received by truck, which in itself is an important reason for the growth in the direct selling of hogs.

Where the Tax Burdens Fall

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Current reports from Washington again quote Congressional leaders as favoring a brake on the rising toll of taxes.

Despite earlier disappointments, the American people will hope eagerly that, this time, the promises are translated into action.

Why? Because, as recent events emphasize, high taxes are clipped out of every worker's earnings, in the form of higher costs of living.

And for this indirect levy on the average citizen's pocketbook they give little in return.

Heavy taxes raise the rent of homes—but they add neither room nor comfort.

Heavy taxes jump the price of land—but they add nothing to the crops it can grow.

Heavy taxes boost the costs of fuel—but they add nothing to the amount of heat or power it produces.

Heavy taxes inflate the price of food—but they add nothing to its nutritive values.

Heavy taxes increase the cost and upkeep of equipment—whether on the farm, or in the home or factory. But they add nothing to the work it can perform.

Wherever applied, heavy taxes take much and contribute little. However disguised, they are still produced in "the sweat of the man who labors."

All citizens realize that a reasonable volume of tax income is necessary to the proper functioning of government. But they also realize that when raised to unreasonable heights, taxes become not so much a necessity as a burden.

They ask their elected representatives in Congress to realize this too—and to act upon that knowledge.

"Blackbeard"

Edward "Blackbeard" Teach, America's most notable native pirate, died in 1718 with his boots on. A British officer, Lieut. Robert Maynard, cut him to ribbons in a duel at Blackbeard's lair in Ocracoke Inlet, North Carolina, in order to get a $500 reward posted by the government. Left to mourn Blackbeard were 14 wives, the youngest sixteen, and the British royal governor, Eden, who shared profits of the pirate's expeditions. Teach, like Bonnet, Morgan and other pirates bold, was of an aristocratic family. He had brothers in the British service who were dutybound to shoot him on sight.

take part. "Use of School Buildings for Subversive Propaganda" will be presented by Mrs. W. Selby Finn, president of the Hamilton Park Woman's Club and Mrs. Lawrence Ejelberg, president of the Brainerd Woman's Club.

"A Declaration of Principle" is the subject for discussion led by Mrs. R. R. Robertson, president of Morgan Park Woman's Club. The subject "Youth" will be discussed by Mrs. Henry L. Hoey and Mrs. Swett.

Luncheon will be served in the Parish House, adjoining the church. The Afternoon session will convene at 1:30 and will give the entire assembly an opportunity of participating in the program as Mr. Glenn Harding will lead in a half hour of singing songs we all know. Mrs. Dana Elliott, radio chairman of the Chicago Heights Club and Mrs. Norman F. Allemeier, district press and publicity chairman arranged the afternoon program. A Radio Skit, "Half an Hour in Any Radio Studio", will be presented by Mrs. Robt. Davis.

The afternoon speaker is Philip Maxwell, Chicago Tribune Good Fellow Editor and Director Chicagoland Music Festival. He will speak on "Promotion".

Reservation should be made with your club dean.

On Friday November 5th at 11:30 a. m. all members of the third Congressional District, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will have the privilege of touring the Park Ridge School for Girls, in Park Ridge, Ill.

Mrs. Geo. Kinnear, district chairman of the school will have charge of the tour.

Those attending should bring a box lunch. Coffee will be served for a small sum.

Early Agriculture in Ohio

So independent were the early Ohioans on agriculture that most other endeavors were considered fruitless. For example, when a young physician wanted to become the husband of Gov. Duncan McArthur's daughter, the father questioned the possibility of the young man earning a livelihood in this profession.

No True American Language

There is no distinct American language. The language spoken in the United States is English. There are phrases and expressions that are used exclusively in the United States that are called Americanisms, but the language is English. The American Indian tribes spoke many different languages; consequently none of those languages could be called the American language.

PALOS PARK

"The Palos Juniors" girls club will meet at the home of Miss Henrietta Baker, 23rd St. and 86 ave., on Friday evening, November 5.

Miss Christiana Hillig, 22 st. and 80th ave. will be initiated into the club. Miss Alice Crawford 127 st. and 76 th ave., has been appointed as chairman of the initiation committee. Co-chairmen are Ruth Vail, and Henrietta Baker. On Friday Oct. 30 the club will visit the "Rodeo". Patricia Saunders 119th st. treasurer will act as chairman for the arrangements.

Because Calumet High School, 813 S. May has been well spoken of by outsiders and visitors and because of its high rating and efficient self-government, honor studies will again be installed. Because of the superior conduct in previous years the study hall in room 215 will again be an honor study hall, which enables the students to govern themselves without a teacher, says Egbert Hunter, vice principal.

Chicago Auto Set For A Very Brilliant Opening

Thrilling Spectacle to mark Classic at International Amphitheatre, November 6 to 13.

Surprises and thrills galore await the hundreds of thousands who will visit the 38th annual Chicago Automobile Show, which is set for its gala inaugural a week from next Saturday, November 6th, at the International Amphitheatre, Halsted and 43rd streets. The classic will continue daily, including Sunday, for one week through November 13.

Except for the first day, when the show opens at 2 p. m., the hour will be 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., with "Fashions of the World" presentations each afternoon and evening in the central arena. A. C. Faeh, show manager, announces that the price of 55 cents, including tax, will prevail uniformly for those who attend either during the day or evening.

For the past two weeks, contests have been carried on to select the most beautiful and typical young women of 20 nations who will participate in the "Fashions of the World." The spectacular showmanship will be further enhanced by the latest styles in furs and evening gowns, as well as native costumes, all combining to glorify the 1938 creations of motordom.

Greeting visitors as the curtain rises in the arena will be a huge globe, the largest ever built. It reaches a height of 40 feet, and had to be constructed in sections at the studios of John C. Becker, scenic director, in Chicago. Striking stage, cloud and electrical effects will aid to the drama of each performance, as will the music of the famous Cavillo Symphonic band.

The show, under the auspices of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association, will be directed by experts who know all the arts of showmanship, and who are imbued with a determination to make the forthcoming presentation superior even to those thrilling efforts of the past in Chicago. Manager Faeh heads the staff, which includes Frank J. Kennedy, widely known in the theatrical world, as technical director and coproducer; Miss Kathryn Wilson of New York, noted stylist and color authority, and Mr. Becker.

Trailers will share the spotlight with the beautiful motor cars, women and styles in the central arena. There will also be a camp effect in the trailer section, a diorama depicting the evolution of highway transportation in the truck section, and a host of fascinating eye-catchers in the passenger car division, created by the manufacturers themselves.

ORLAND PARK

Mr. and Mrs. Gottfried Koehler, well known old time residents of Orland Park had the pleasure of observing their 60th wedding anniversary last Sunday, October 24. Relatives and friends gathered in their home and helped to make the event a memorable affair. Mr. Koehler is 84 years old and Mrs. Koehler is 81. Their many friends extend congratulations.

The Orland Park village board, at their meeting Monday night, adopted a new plan of making this village a spotless town. The board has announced that the first Wednesday in each month will be cleanup day and the residents of Orland Park are requested to place containers of tin cans, rubbish, bottles in the front of their homes or in an open alley so that they may be collected. No garbage is to be placed in the rubbish container under no circumstances.

Fire Chief John Helenhouse is slowly improving from the injuries he sustained in a recent automobile accident.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schmaedeke entertained Mr. Otto Ehtor, editor of the German-American of Joliet at dinner Saturday evening.

A movement is on foot to organize a local school band.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

The boys and girls enjoy their new volleyball game very much. They wish to express their appreciation to those responsible for giving them this sport.

"The Opehi Tatler" which was issued October 14 is the first attempt of the students to have a school paper. Because of some defective hectograph pads, they were unable to make as many copies as they desired, but they hope to remedy this next time.

We were sorry to lose Margaret Bergin last week who transferred to a Chicago high school as it was inconvenient for her to get here.

The girls in the Art class are studying design. They have been designing decorations for plates. They are putting the designs on paper plates which they will shellac. In the Art Corner, we have some plates which the girls have brought from home, as examples of what they consider good designs.

Bernice Rauch and Alma Wozniak have been appointed librarians.

The Orland Park high school will present a three-act comedy by Howard Reed entitled "Sound Your Horn" on Nov. 16 Tuesday evening at 8:15. There will be specialty numbers between the acts.

The cast is: Drusilla, a little girl about town, Bernice Rauch; Phyllis, her chum, Mildred Doctor; Etta Lamb, a waitress, Violet Ferry; Mr. Angus, attorney for the Van Dyke estate, Roy Carlson; Homer Bird, contact man for the Empire Bottling Works, Philip Sippel. Christine Eliot, owner of a roadside refreshment stand, Marie Heiting; Mrs. Van Dyke, self-made millionairess, Hazel Uthe; Diane Webster, her niece, Lois Strong; Theodore Webster, her nephew, Norman Yunker and Mr. Beasley, caretaker for Van Dyke estate, Arthur Uthe.

The manual training class is keeping very busy learning how to make molds in sand of various patterns. They are also working hard on a new wood-working project—a footstool with a rush-style seat. Others are finishing up their bread boards or half-lap and mortise and tenon joints. In the near future we are to start projects in hardwood—oak, walnut and maple.

Volley ball still maintains first place for recreational games, although basketball will soon be in full swing. We are trying to organize both grade school and high school basketball teams this year.

Report cards were given out last Friday.

Attendance has been very regular for the first seven weeks of school.

New Laundry Simplifies Wash Day

"Getting the jump on wash day" by spending a few minutes the night before is suggested to householders by Clarence Beagley of Orland Park representative here for the new Bendix home laundry, an automatic machine which will wash, rinse and dry-damp clothes ready for the line while the operator is asleep.

On the night before any wash day a housewife may place a batch of clothes in the machine for a relatively few minutes of pre-soaking, Mr. Beagley explained, and after a quick draining, soap is added and the twist of a couple of electric dials which govern temperature of water and time desired for washing does the rest of the work. A housewife may retire for the night after setting he dials and find her clothes ready for the line in the morning, the machine meanwhile having been turned off automatically at the end of its job during the night.

Before breakfast the first batch of clothes can be removed, and another can be added for the same automatic process. The second batch will be finished when breakfast is over and the morning dishes attended to, and even if a third batch is left for attention, wash day can be terminated and all clothes on the line by mid-morning.

"From that point on," said Mr. Beagley, "every housewife will know what she wants to do—whether to use the extra time with the children, for other home-making duties, for shopping, for reading, for sports, or for visiting."

Reason For Stock Market Tobbogan

By Ralph E. Church
Illinois Representative in Congress
The chief topic of conversation now is: What is the meaning of the toboggan slide of the stock and commodity markets?

Most of us do not own any securities, and even fewer of us have any direct dealings with Wall Street in the buying and selling of stock. We are not immediately affected by any slump in security values. But we appreciate that banks and insurance companies where we have our small family savings are dependent upon such values. And, with some forebodings we recall a stock market break in 1929 and these subsequent years of economic depression.

While Wall Street is not blessed with clairvoyant powers, it is in intimate touch with what business has been doing and its present state of activity. Notwithstanding its shortcomings as a true economic index, Wall Street is looked upon by the average American as something of a barometer of business. When market values are consistently rising, we are confident and optimistic. When they decline, we become concerned and apprehensive. Naturally, even tho we suffered no losses, we became alarmed with this recent wave of selling of securities.

To attempt to evaluate the contributing factors to this stock values decline is a hopeless task. In the past week I believe I have seen no less than a dozen different explanations. Here are some I recall: announcement of a market drop in steel; labor difficulties; war news; the New Deal capital gains and undistributed earnings tax; faulty regulations by the Securities and Exchange Commission; over-regulation of business by the government; prospects for still further regulations and increased taxes; and the announcement by the President of a large deficit for the current fiscal year than he anticipated.

As this is being written there has been a rally in the market values. Whatever the reason, the event should serve to indicate to the American people that the two most important elements for sustained economic recovery in the United States are lacking. They are: certainty and confidence! Rather than foster those elements the policy we have been following has tended to destroy them.

Our social objective is "the greatest happiness for the greatest number." Our immediate problem has been to provide jobs and improve the standard of living. It remains unsolved largely because we have not looked at the problem realistically but rather experimentally.

To have employees you must have employers. To have wages you must have profits. To have profits you must have investments and sales. To have investments and sales you must have confidence and a certainty as to the future. All that is elementary, but it demonstrates that certainty and confidence lie at the very basis of our economic system.

One does not borrow unless he is confident he can repay, nor does one loan unless he is confident of repayment. One does not buy or sell unless he is confident he can pay or be paid. One does not invest unless he is confident of a return on his investment.

When we come to seek the reason why there has not been greater economic recovery and why in recent months business has declined, the answer is largely to be found in a lack of confidence. And one of the greatest contributing factors to this lack of confidence is the instability of our national credit. The President has predicted a net deficit for the current fiscal year of $695 million, which represents an increase of $277 million over his estimate last April. The public debt is expected to soar well above $37 billion.

Such a situation promises either increased taxation or repudiation. This outlook of uncertainty and instability destroys confidence, keeps capital idle, keeps business stagnate and unemployment continues. The uncertainty and instability is no doubt reflected in the sharp fluctuations in the stock market.

Social reforms are necessary. Re-adjustments are necessary. But one Congress can make to social improvement, resulting from business revival, is to set itself to the task of eliminating the inequities in the tax structure and reducing the cost of government.

MOKENA

Thirty recruits for the new school band of Mokena is the objective which will begin at the school next week.

"It is not impossible to achieve this goal," comments bandmaster, H. A. Strom, because of the fact that the instruments can be rented at low cost, instead of being purchased outright.

Parents of the children who passed the test given two weeks ago will be notified. A showing of instruments which can be rented will be held in the school within the next two weeks.

The Band Parents association will hold their regular monthly meeting next Wednesday night at 8 p. m. in the Mokena School Auditorium.

On Sunday October 24, Mrs. August Pflieger enjoyed a cousin reunion in her home and at the same time celebrated her daughter, Genevieve's 20th birthday. Covers were laid for ten at the six o'clock supper. Cousins from out of town were, Mrs. Emma Burckholder from Wabash, Indiana and Mrs. Harry Beasley from Chicago.

Harold Cappel underwent a tonsil operation in Silver Cross hospital last Saturday morning.

Mrs. Matt Newton is ill in her home.

Mr. Wm. Lowe and daughter Ruth visited with Mr. and Mrs. Donald Maue in Mokena, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Clark and family have moved into the Coler house on Wolf road.

Mrs. L. G. Bruder, Mrs. Rene Guindon and Mrs. Wm. Semmler attended the meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club Wednesday afternoon.

A daughter was born last week to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brown of Chicago. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown were former Mokena residents, the latter being before her marriage Miss Edna Bettenhausen.

Calvin Barenz was a visitor in the Mokena school last week. Calvin is now living in Harvey where his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Barenz moved a few weeks ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mattes left Wednesday for a visit with the latter's mother in Mauston, Wis.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Polishing Linoleum.—Dissolve a lump of sugar in the water when washing linoleum or oilcloth, and a brilliant polish will result.

Small Molds for Pudding.—In place of one large basin for a steamed pudding, try several small molds, placing them all in one large saucepan. They will take half as long to cook as one large pudding.

Crab Savory.—1 crab, 3 tomatoes, 1 lettuce, watercress, 1 egg, pepper and salt. Shred the crab meat finely and mix with a little mayonnaise. Wash the lettuce and arrange leaves around and at the bottom of the dish. Place some crab in the center, then season with pepper and salt; add slices of tomato and hard-boiled egg and watercress.

Using Kerosene Safely.—One of the safest ways of using kerosene is to mix it with wood or coal ashes, then use a few spoonfuls of this mixture when starting or rekindling a fire. This can be stored for regular use in a gallon bucket or other suitable container.

Opening Jars.—A strap with a buckle on one end can be used to good advantage in opening glass fruit jars. Run the strap through the buckle and tighten it around the cap. This enables you to get a good grip on the lid.

Dried Peel.—It is nice to dry the skins of several oranges and lemons and grate them, then putting them in a glass bottle in the refrigerator to be kept for flavoring purposes. It certainly saves time in the future and one is inclined to use these flavorings in interesting ways if already at hand.

Spaghetti and Cheese.—A nice way of preparing spaghetti that does not require lighting the oven. Fry one chopped onion and one-half pound ground meat in olive oil until nicely browned. Add two cups tomato puree or sifted tomato pulp, one teaspoon paprika, salt and pepper to taste. When nicely blended serve over plain boiled spaghetti and over the top sprinkle finely grated cheese.

Preserving Bright Color.—Cooking preserves or jelly rapidly helps to retain the bright color of the fruit. The addition of pectin shortens the necessary cooking time.

Just for a Change.—If you cannot afford to buy anything new for the house and you are just a little bit disinterested this fall, try changing the position of the furniture and see if that bored feeling will not depart.

The inspector pulled a paper from his pocket. Mark Trent glowered at it as if it were a rattler with head raised to strike.

"Here it is. The real thing. Signatures and everything o. k. I found it—"

"You found it in my desk, didn't you, Inspector?" Brooke interrupted icily.

Mark Trent's eyes were stormy, his lips were white.

"That's enough. Don't go on with this, Brooke."

"But I am going on with it."

"Let her tell her story, Mark. It's only fair to her."

Sam joined the two men before the fire.

"Jed's right, m'lud. The inspector found the paper in your desk. That's your cue, Brooke. Go on from there."

Brooke went on.

She told of her suspicion the first time she had come into this very library that there was a reason other than a passion for the sea in winter which had brought two men from the city to live in Mark Trent's house; and she told of Mrs. Gregory's admission, the afternoon before the supper club party, that she had witnessed a will of Mary Amanda Dane's and that she had been warned by Jed Stewart not to speak of it. And how, almost before Mrs. Gregory's car was out of the drive, Henri Jacques had confronted her with a paper and the lie that he had found it in her desk.

"Don't speak! Don't!" She interrupted her story sharply as Mark Trent opened his lips. "Let me finish!"

"I took it with the idea that if I didn't, he might make more trouble with it. I let him think that I was considering his proposition that I pay him for keeping quiet. Of course I wasn't, but I can't expect you two men who have been suspicious of me from the moment you learned of my friendship with Mrs. Dane, to believe that. I was coming directly to this house with it. First, locked in my room, I looked at it to be sure it wasn't a blackmailing scheme of Henri's. It wasn't. It was Mary Amanda Dane's will leaving all her property, except legacies to the Jacques, to her nephew, Mark Trent."

"Stop and get your breath, Brooke; you'll crack-up if you don't," Sam warned.

"I won't crack-up and I won't stop till I get this thing off my mind. It has been a hideous nightmare, holding back that paper, I mean. Of course the contents of that will were a shock for a minute; but I knew that Mrs. Dane had been just. Then I thought of the play, that the sudden appearance of a missing will—there's drama for you, Sam—might upset the performance; so I locked the thing in my desk. I had planned to bring it here this evening. When I got back from headquarters to-night, I went to my desk to get it. The drawer was empty. Now I know that Inspector Bill Harrison, your sleuth, had found it, Mr. Trent."

"That's enough, Brooke," Mark Trent's voice was low and authoritative. "I don't believe that you have had that will. I know—"

"Wait a minute!" Inspector Bill Harrison cut in. "Come over here."

He spread out the paper on the desk. He drew a flat leather case from his breast pocket and removed from it a white scrap.

"Exhibit A. Watch!"

The scrap fitted into the torn corner. There was a glint in his eyes as they passed from face to face of the three men bending over to read the finely written lines.

"I don't know what the rest of you folks think," his voice was as soft as velvet, "but, in spite of the fact I found it in her desk, I'm sure Miss Reyburn hasn't had the will in her possession ever since it was signed, because—"

He laid the tip of a square-topped finger on the torn-off corner:

"Because I found this scrap caught in Mrs. Hunt's bag the night her diamonds were snatched."

CHAPTER XV

For the length of time it took the old clock in the hall to chime the quarter hour, there was silence in the library, a silence as tense as if the still body of a black-haired woman with the open bag gripped in one bruised hand lay in their midst. Inspector Harrison broke the spell.

"And that ain't all I've got to show you. Bring him in, Tim!"

Brooke's breath stopped as a tall policeman with huge ears pushed a cowering figure into the room. Henri! Henri here! Would he dare persist in the lie that he had found that will in her desk?

"Sit down, Brooke."

With hands on her shoulders Mark Trent drew her from behind the chair and forced her gently into the seat. She felt his presence behind her as he said sharply:

"It's your move, Inspector. Let's get this thing over with."

"It ain't my move, Mark. It's Henri Jacques'. He's going to tell you what's kept him the busiest butler in the U. S. You're on the air, Jacques. Spill it!"

The command held the crack of a lion-tamer's whip. Henri drew his fingers over his slack lips. He made two attempts to speak before he produced a voice.

"I'll tell the whole story, Mr. Mark, and it isn't so bad as the inspector's trying to make out. I swear it isn't. I didn't kill—"

"Start at the beginning!"

"I will, Inspector, I will."

Brooke looked down at her clenched fingers. She couldn't keep her eyes on Henri. Once she had seen a dog being beaten who groveled as he groveled now. His voice shook as he went on:

"It was like this, Mr. Mark. Madame Dane sent for Clotilde and me to come to the living-room one afternoon. It was the nurse's day off. She was in the wheel chair and Madame Gregory was there. Your aunt said as how we were all to sign a paper in her presence and then she was to sign in our presence. She laughed kind of shaky and said:

"I Won't Crack Up and I Won't Stop."

"I don't know much law, Anne—Anne was Madame Gregory—but I've learned how a will has to be signed to make it legal."

"Did Mrs. Gregory say anything?"

"Yes, Mr. Mark. She said, 'Do you think you should do this without consulting your lawyer?' and your aunt said that Mr. Stewart was away and she didn't dare wait till he came home because she hadn't been feeling well. We wrote our names. Mrs. Gregory left, Clotilde went back to the kitchen, and then the old madame handed the paper to me and said:

"Put that in my safe upstairs, Henri. I'll give it to Mr. Stewart when he gets back, but first bring me a glass of sherry. I'm tired."

"She looked so white I thought she was going to faint. I jammed the paper in my pocket and ran. When I came back with the wine, Miss Reyburn was standing by the mantel laughing; you remember that afternoon, don't you, Miss?"

"Yes."

"Direct your question to me, not to Miss Reyburn, Henri. What did you do with that paper?"

"I was coming to that, Mr. Mark. The old madame was taken very sick that night. Not until after she'd been gone a week or two did I think of it."

"Then of course you read it?"

"Yes, sir."

"You showed it to Clotilde?"

"Yes, sir."

"When did you and she decide to fasten the theft of it on Miss Reyburn?"

The voice which came from behind Brooke's chair set her a-shiver. A steady hand rested on her shoulder.

"We—we didn't think of it, Mr. Mark. Mrs. Hunt suggested that."

"How did she know about it?"

Henri passed shaking fingers across his lips.

"Some way she found out that we were going to sell your aunt's silver. Clotilde and I thought we might as well have it as the strange girl she'd left it to."

The glance Henri Jacques cast at the inspector was green with venom.

"Mrs. Hunt said, if I'd get the silver to the white cottage, she'd dispose of it; that it was rare and worth lots of money, that a dealer would believe that it was hers, that he might suspect me. That seemed reasonable. Mrs. Hunt knew of a man to help. She said she'd take care of that will, too, she'd get money out of you for it and we'd go fifty-fifty."

"Go on, Henri!" Mark Trent's voice was hoarse.

"I gave it to her. The afternoon before the filling station murder—hold up, I showed the man she sent where the silver was, forgot the keys and left them in the doors. I remembered them in the middle of a movie, came home, went upstairs very quiet and got them. The man who was to move the silver to the old limousine was waiting in my room. While you were all laughing and eating downstairs I let him through into the Other House by the upper connecting door. He took the stuff through your house—the Japs were out, and I pretended to go to bed. He was to make a cross on the white cover when he had it in the car. I drove it to the cottage. I went in to tell Mrs. Hunt the silver was outside, ready to take to the city. She—she was on the floor. I swear she was. I swear I didn't touch her."

"But you took that paper over there on the desk out of her bag, didn't you?"

"I told you once I did, Inspector. I felt it belonged to me. But I swear I never touched her."

"Take him out, Tim."

Henri stopped to hurl defiance at Inspector Bill Harrison.

"You think you're smart, but you wouldn't have known anything about this till we were safe out of the country, Inspector, if that expert thief Mrs. Hunt brought into the game hadn't stopped to wash and shave in Mr. Stewart's bathroom. Pretty snappy guy he was. I suppose he had to dress up fine before he called on her. She paid for pulling him in. He got her jewels all right, and he was out to get Mrs. Gregory's tonight. I wasn't in on that deal, Mr. Mark."

"Take him away, Tim." Inspector Harrison's eagle eyes followed the two men from the room before they came back to Brooke.

"Sorry I had to touch your desk, Miss Reyburn, but a high falsetto voice phoned me you had the will—I know now that it was Henri Jacques—so I went through your room while you were all at the play. I guess you're glad the truth is out. The minute I heard of that bath stunt I knew you to look for. That guy has made a specialty of breaking into houses week-ends where the folks were away, of making himself at home in the tub and carrying off what he wanted when he left, mostly men's clothes. Maggie Cassidy was right when she said he was a swell dresser. He ought to be. He's had his pick of the best. It's kind of funny when you think of it, ain't it? When I accused him of killing Mrs. Hunt, he crumpled and spilled the whole story. He had seen her rings when she engaged him to move the silver. Wanted them. Knocked Hunt out first. He's a quick worker. He and his pals aren't killers. There wasn't a gun in the gangload. There's a joke to it, they don't one of them know yet that the coroner's verdict was 'heart failure from fright.' I've kept that under my hat so I could scare the truth out of them. Well, Mark, your silver's safe and you've got your aunt's money."

"Thanks, Inspector, I'll tell you how much I appreciate what you've done, later. Sam, get Brooke's wrap. I'll take her home. You and Lucette stay here and get the inspector something to eat. Wait for me, Bill, there are a few points that need clearing up. I have something to talk over with Miss Reyburn, then I'll come back."

"You are not going home with me and we have nothing to talk over." Did he think that he could wipe out the memory of his suspicion of her in this lordly manner? Brooke asked herself.

"Oh yes, we have."

Sam chuckled.

"One of the thirty-six dramatic situations. Snap into it, Brooke. It is apparent even to this boyish intelligence that Mark wants to talk to you alone. Fair enough. Why make him go on the air? Be kind to him, he deserves well of his countrymen."

They crossed the terrace in silence. The snow had not been cleared from before the door of Lookout House. Mark Trent swept Brooke from her feet and carried her into the vestibule. He kept an arm about her as he opened the door. Something turning like the wings of an autogiro in her throat, cut off her protest. The green living-room awaited them, softly lighted, faintly fragrant. Above the mantel the Duchess looked down with grave eyes; below, coals, murmurous as purring kittens, gave out a gentle glow.

"Take off your wrap."

Brooke slipped from beneath the velvet and the hands tightening on her shoulders. She barricaded herself behind a high-back chair. With one arm on the mantel, Mark Trent faced her. His eyes, smiling a little, maddeningly cool, filled her with rage. She challenged:

"You would come. Why? Didn't you want to tell me before the others that you had known about that will all the time?"

"Flying Dutchman"

SO AMAZING have been the developments in aviation in recent years that it is a brave man indeed who will venture to say "Why, they can't do that!" when told of some new feat in the air by man. Therefore, it is not especially remarkable, perhaps, that the whole world accepted as authentic a photograph which came out of Germany a year or so ago.

It showed a man flying through the air just above and a little ahead of four others who were running after him. It might have been mistaken for a skier in action except for the fact that he was holding two bell-like objects and apparently blowing into them through a tube. The description on this photograph read:

"For the first time in history a man has succeeded in flying under his own power. This picture shows Erich Koehler of Berlin performing that feat, followed by his excited friends. He blew into the bell-like arrangement, causing to revolve two rotors which also served as wings. On his feet was a ski landing gear, and attached to his hips was a 'tail skid.'"

So cleverly had the photograph been "doctored" that it passed for an authentic representation of an epoch-making incident in aviation and was accepted as such—yes, even by American newspapers which printed the picture with the headline, "Man's First Flight Under His Own Power." It was not until some time later that the hoax was revealed. Considering the news that has been coming out of Germany about Hitler's treatment of some of its citizens, one wonders if the "flying Dutchman's" name has some significance. "Koehler" could easily be mistaken for "kosher," you know!

Washing the White Lions

IT'S only once or twice in a century that Easter Sunday falls on April 1 but one of those occasions the coincidence made it easy for some April Fool prankster to perpetrate a classic hoax. In March, 1860, several thousand citizens of London were greatly flattered when they received a neatly-printed and official-looking card which bore the following inscription:

"TOWER OF LONDON! Admit the bearer and friend to view the annual ceremony of washing the white lions on Sunday, April 1, 1860. Admitted at the White Gate. It is particularly requested that no gratuities be given to the wardens and their assistants."

No one had ever before heard of either the White Gate or the white lions so everyone who received one of these invitations was curious to know whether the latter were real or just statues. Children especially were thrilled at the prospect of seeing them—it was just like going to the zoo.

A few staid citizens were dubious about the propriety of attending such a function on Easter Sunday but that didn't bother several thousand others who entirely overlooked the fact that it was also April 1. So they swarmed to Tower hill in hansom cabs and on foot and began inquiring eagerly of the gatekeepers where the White Gate was.

As soon as the gatekeepers saw the invitations they immediately recognized the hoax and they greatly enjoyed the opportunity of answering "April Fool!" to the eager inquirers. In fact, it has been suspected, although never proved, that some of these gatekeepers were the perpetrators of the hoax which has become historic in England.

Long Distance Taxi Ride

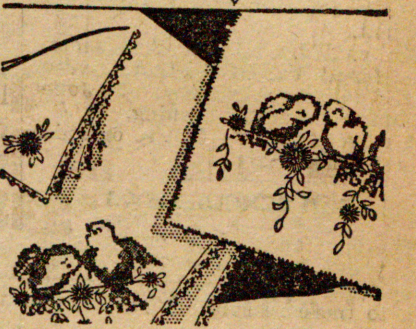

SEVERAL years ago newspapers all over the country printed an amusing story, furnished to them by one of the press associations, which told how a bibulous visitor to New York hailed a taxicab and, in response to the driver's query, "Where to?", replied, "Losh Angless—and please don't drive too fast." Whereupon the taxi driver took him to Los Angeles and, arriving there, looked at his meter and announced that the fare was $900, which the bibulous one cheerfully paid. Then, so the story ran, the driver sold his taxi and returned to New York by bus.

It was a good story until—the cab driver mentioned was located in New York and denied the whole yarn. He did admit that, during the depression, he had loaded his motherless children in his taxi and headed west, hoping to find work somewhere en route. But he found that jobs were just as scarce in other parts of the country as they were in New York, so, when he reached California, he sold his taxicab and returned home with his children by bus. So that much of the yarn, at least, was true.

As for the tipsy passenger and the $900 taxi fare which he paid—that part of the story was invented by the press agent for the junk yard to which the taxi man had sold his car. That, in itself, isn't such a bad story. For who ever before heard of a junk yard hiring a press agent!

Nazareth, in Galilee

The town of Nazareth, in Galilee, had a military history for many years in medieval days. Mohammedans captured it early in the first years of their faith, but never vanquished the faith of its inhabitants. The Crusaders in 1100 retook it and made it the see city of the diocese of Scythopolis. Afterwards it was captured by the Mohammedans, and again recaptured, until in 1263, on again taking possession of it, the followers of the Prophet massacred all the inhabitants, who were in any way connected with Christianity.
